Notice in Paper Tells 'Readiness'

Secrecy Veils Activity at Home of Wealthy Tacoma Family.

By the Associated Press.

Tacoma, Wash., May 28.—Somewhere, outside the law, the kidnapers of little George Weyerhaeuser were believed laying final plans tonight to attempt collection of $200,000 ransom for their curly-haired captive—and deliver him to his parents.

It was indicated the parents, Mr and Mrs. J. P. Weyerhaeuser, awaited only directions from the abductors to begin negotiating over the ransom.

Tomorrow is the "deadline" set by the kidnapers for payment.

Fearing for the 9-year-old victim's life, if the ransom is not paid on time, the lumber-wealthy parents inserted an advertisement in the personal column of a Seattle newspaper today announcing they were ready for negotiations.

"We are ready, Percy Minnie," the notice said.

Publication of the notice was in accordance with instructions from the kidnapers, who snatched the boy shortly before noon Friday somewhere between school and his home.

Whether the new ad meant the family had the demanded amount ready or wished to open negotiations for a lesser amount could not be learned.

Difficulties Foreseen.

Friends declared yesterday it would be impossible for the distracted parents to raise $200,000—the sum paid in the Bremer and Urschel kidnaping cases.

The Weyerhaeuser family is reputedly vastly wealthy, with timber holdings throughout the Northwest. Friends said, however, they had suffered heavy losses in recent years.

Private investigators reported discovering today a three-story ramshackle house, hidden in trees and underbrush, which might have served as a possible "lookout post" for the kidnapers.

In the structure, once a $50,000 home, fresh footprints were found in the dust, one of them from the rubber heels of a man's shoe.

An upper bedroom, they said, contained a stool and a block from which the dust and cobwebs had been removed. A window in it overlooked the area where the boy was last seen.

United States Marshal A. J. Chitty said he believed the boy was being held in an apartment house or home in some center of population. He doubted very much if the kidnapers would risk trying to find some isolated hideout or island, as strangers are "noticed" to much in the country.

How, when or where the ransom money would be paid or negotiations started was one of many angles shrouded in obscurity.

There was nothing to indicate the kidnapers had replied to the parents' message that they were ready to negotiate.

Visitors at House.

All seemed quiet about the house, on the porch of which a large umbrella stood opened.

Since the kidnaping, a flapping sheet and a sweater, besides the umbrella have been placed on the porch, but it could not be learned whether they were signals.

No mention of a signal display was contained in the ransom note, which demanded the $200,000 in $20, $10 and $5 bills, not gold certificates. It was gold certificates which led to the arrest of Bruno Richard Hauptmann as the slayer of the Lindbergh baby.

Shortly before noon today the other Weyerhaeuser children were driven away in a big automobile, with drawn blinds.

The children ran from the house to the waiting car and were whisked toward the home of the late John P. Weyerhaeuser, their grandfather, whose death preceded the kidnaping by only a few days.

Persons watching the house also observed two men in conversation on a rear glass-enclosed porch. Blinds on the porch were drawn quickly when those inside saw they were being watched.

Port Angeles authorities were unable to locate an automobile described by two men as containing a boy resembling the missing lad.

Ed and Hugh Queener, brothers, told authorities of the Channel City they were positive a car whose occupants asked them highway information last night contained George.

Air Tragedies in the U. S.

Private Robert J. Hurst, a marine stationed at Quantico, was killed when his rented plane nosedived to Beacon Field, near Alexandria, Va.

Two Army fliers and two newsreel cameramen were killed when a bombing plane crashed and burned in Sequoia National Park in California.

A Marine private was killed late yesterday when a private plane he was flying banked, went into a spin, and dived to the ground from a height of about 700 feet over Beacon Field, 3 miles south of Alexandria.

The victim was Robert J. Hurst, 25, first-class private attached to the Marine Barracks at Quantico. The plane was wrecked and Hurst's body was mutilated.

Officials at the field said Hurst went there about 5 p. m. and rented a single-seater plane. As he took off, he stunted once or twice, but later began flying at a level. He had not been up more than five minutes when he turned the plane. It slipped off on one wing, went into the spin and hit the ground before the pilot could regain control.

Hurst had a beginner's flying license, and he had about 20 hours of solo flying, according to persons at the flying field. He had often rented the plane and flown from the field before. The plane was not owned by the flying field itself, but by a group of men who store several planes there and operate a rental service.

After the crash the ambulance of the Alexandria Rescue Squad rushed to the field and brought Hurst to the Alexandria Hospital. He was dead on arrival. His brother, Oscar Hurst, also a Marine stationed at Quantico, was at the hospital when his brother's body arrived there. He was reluctant to discuss the crash, but said Robert Hurst was from Florida, and had a father, 83 years old, in that State.

By the Associated Press.

Fresno, Calif., May 28.—An Army bombing plane engaged in war maneuvers went out of control today, crashed and burned in Sequoia National Park, killing its four occupants, including two Army fliers and two newsreel cameramen.

The craft, one of 16 planes flying over Sequoia National Park in maneuvers, went out of control and fell into trees in the park two miles north of Lodgepole.

Army men said they saw at least one body removed from the flaming wreckage.

Those on Board.

Those aboard the big bomber were:

Private Guy Porter, Kansas City.

Allyn P. Alexander, San Francisco, Fox Newsreel man.

Commanding officers of the squadron said they believed the controls became entangled, possibly with newsreel equipment, as Lieut. Root kept circling the plane until it crashed.

The plane was first sighted by the Senate Moves To Liberalize Divorces Here

Seven Grounds, Instead of Present One, Given Indorsement.

A bill which allows seven causes for divorce in the District of Columbia instead of the one cause in the present law passed the Senate yesterday with only a few questions and some joshing among Senators.

The measure, sponsored by the District Bar Association and the Women's Bar Association, was one of seven pieces of District legislation approved as the Senate sped through the calendar.

Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, explained the bill after questions had been asked by Majority Leader Robinson and Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee.

Other Causes Listed.

He pointed out that, whereas the present District divorce law permits the granting of an absolute divorce only on the grounds of adultery, the bill carries the following causes: Adultery, cruelty, desertion for two years, separation for five years without cohabitation, habitual drunkenness for one year, final conviction of a felony involving moral turpitude, and incurable insanity for five years.

A divorce may be obtained by a District resident on one or more of these grounds only after a residence of a year, but if the complaint occurred outside the District the residential requirement is two years.

Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, stated that, while he would not obect to the bill, he is opposed in principle to the liberalizing of divorce laws.

McKellor accused Senator Ellison D. Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, of being jealous of the bill because of South Carolina's ban against divorce on any grounds.

The measure must be passed by the House and be signed by the President before it becomes a law, but so far it has encountered no opposition.

Minor Measures.

The other District bills passed by the Senate are minor in character. The two most significant measures on the calendar were held over because of objections. They are the small loans and the needy blind pension bills.

Bills passed authorize the E. F. Droop & Sons Co. to renew its charter; settle a claim of $1,316.440 by Lyman C. Drake, who was injured while employed by the District Committee on Employment in 1933; change the name of the German Orphan Asylum Association to the German Orphan Home; authorize the Boy Scouts to use public parks during their late summer jamboree; clarify the law relative to the control of the National Zoo, and settle a claim of $1,000 by A. B. Dunham for injuries suffered by his son, Robert A. Dunham, when struck by a Treasury truck December 5, 1934, at Seventh street and North Carolina avenue southeast.

Four of the bills have passed the House and now go to the President. They are the Droop charter, the Drake relief, the German Orphan Asylum and the Boy Scouts bills.

Mrs. Buck Reported in Reno.

Reno, Nev., May 28 (AP).—Pearl S. Buck, author of "The Good Earth," was reported by a reliable source today to have established residence on the Nevada side of Lake Tahoe, presumably for divorce. The confidential source said Mrs. Buck, whose husband is John Lossing Buck, arrived here from New York several days ago and shortly afterward took a private residence in the Tahoe region.

Cabinet Near Fall on Plan To Aid Franc

Flandin Asserts He May Dissolve Parliament, Bank on Election.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Paris, May 28.—The French Cabinet was reported tonight to be so shaken at parliamentary opposition to its demand for dictatorial powers to defend the franc that its resignation was a possibility.

Friends of Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin said, however, he might attempt to dissolve Parliament and take his fight before the country in new elections.

Some parliamentarians asserted the Cabinet might resign tomorrow night unless opposition within the Chamber finance committee and former Premier Edouard Herriot's powerful radical Socialist Party was overcome.

Devaluation became an open issue as the Cabinet, its political life in the balance, asked Parliament to grant it sweeping emergency powers to defend the franc.

Chamber Grim.

A grim, almost silent Chamber of Deputies listened coolly while Finance Minister Louis Germain-Martin revealed the full frightening extent of the flight from the franc, scathingly assailed "speculators," declared "devaluation would cause general impoverishment in France" and pleaded for near-dictatorship in economic matters.

With the cabinet's overthrow on the issue freely predicted in the Chamber lobbies, the deputies adjourned until Thursday, despite the government's request that it begin discussion immediately.

Strong hostility to the government's demand quickly developed in the Radical Socialist Party, which counts 100 deputies in the Chamber.

So strong was the sentiment that, although no vote was taken at the party caucus, some members urged Herriot to resign as minister of state.

Just before Germain-Martin told the legislators that losses of gold from the Bank of France's vaults totaled 9,000,000,000 francs (about $594,000,000) in the last two months, the bank raised its discount rate from 4 to 6 per cent in another determined effort to halt speculation against France's currency.

Third Rise in Week.

It was the third time in one week the discount rate had been increased—from 2½ to 3, to 4, to 6 per cent—and the new figure was the highest rate since the late Raymond Poincare "saved the franc" by similar means in 1926.

In requesting the extraordinary powers, Germain-Martin told the deputies the rhythm of gold shipments from France had been steadily increasing.

"The Senate and the Chamber of Deputies delegate to the government the power to take, until December 31, 1935, all measures having the force of law designed to restore public finance, revive economic life, defend public credit and support the currency."

Declaring the government determined to crush "speculation," and defend the franc by balancing the budget and restoring credit, the finance minister said ominously:

"If you refuse to see the gravity of these circumstances, tomorrow no minister of finance will be able

Mine Strike Involving 510,000 Is Set June 17 as New Dealers, In Daze, Seek to Salvage NRA

Textile Chief Threatens Walkout Wherever Wages Are Cut.

Labor Board Quits, Looking to June 16

By Felix Bruner.

Threats of serious labor disturbances followed yesterday in the wake of the Supreme Court decision outlawing essential parts of the national industrial recovery act.

A strike of 450,000 bituminous coal miners appeared certain on June 17, when the present contract between workers and operators expires.

Miners and operators meeting yesterday decided by a vote of 44 to 9 to drop negotiations. John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, immediately ordered union officials in all Appalachian fields to meet in Washington to make strike plans.

At the same time, Francis J. Gorman, vice president of the United Textile Workers, said that his union would strike immediately against any mill lowering wages below those fixed by the code. Representatives of the textile interests indicated that with abandonment of the code—the first signed under NRA—future policies would be left up to individual mills.

Labor Board to Dissolve.

The National Labor Relations Board, set up to enforce NRA labor provisions, announced that it had suspended its activities and indicated it was preparing for dissolution on June 16, when the NRA act expires. The board has held that Section 7 (a) of the recovery act applies only to codified industries and that with suspension of codes its enforcement activities come to an end.

The Labor Board's announcement said:

"Neither the National Labor Relations Board nor the regional boards will hold any further arguments or hearings, pending the determination of some future policy. No decision has been made with respect to the election cases which have been argued, but not yet determined by the respective circuit courts of appeals."

A new labor board, perhaps with some of the same personnel as the present board, would come into existence if Congress enacts the Wagner labor disputes bill.

Situation "Doesn't Look Good."

President Roosevelt conferred late in the day with Labor Secretary Perkins, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and Lewis. Earlier in the day Green met with six members of the executive committee of the American Federation of Labor, who went over the court decision, apparently without arriving at any plans for the future.

"We spent an hour and a half analyzing the extent of the blow," Green said after the meeting. "I don't know what we shall be able to salvage. It doesn't look very good. It was a very sweeping decision."

Green said he believed that the Wagner bill would be passed and

Trade Heads Rally To Preserve Codes

Plea for Patriotism to Hold NRA Gains Is Weighed.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Threatened by labor difficulties, including at least a Nation-wide strike in the coal industry and a resumption of guerilla price-cutting practices, Administration chieftains yesterday continued to appear dazed and uncertain over consequences of the Supreme Court decision invalidating NRA codes and probably seriously crippling other New Deal measures.

There was some discussion of formulating a program of voluntary codes dealing with minimum wages, maximum hours and abolition of child labor—perhaps an appeal by the President to the country to cooperate patriotically in maintaining gains made under the NRA until new legislation can be enacted.

Consideration was being given in half-a-dozen Administration quarters to schemes for preserving NRA objectives within the scope of the Supreme Court's restricted definition of Federal jurisdiction over hours and wages of intrastate business and the requirement that Congress specify a standard to guide the President in administering such legislation.

Look to Trade Board.

There was talk of expanding the Federal Trade Commission and under its jurisdiction seeking observance of codes dealing with hours, wages and child labor by granting immunity from antitrust laws made more drastic than at present. Some believed that without a constitutional amendment the Federal Government would remain impotent in effectively handling industrial relations, but this was generally held to be a long-range solution, while an immediate remedy was the concern of the day.

It was a day of feverish, inconclusive consultation in Washington and one of nervous anxiety in the business and labor worlds, with industrial leaders urging continued observance of codes, stock prices in Wall Street tumbling sharply, evidences of some code abandonment, labor unrest making its apparance and uncertainty apparent in every quarter of economic life.

Confusion and uncertainty was especially marked in the Capital, Congress virtually shut down, unable to proceed with pending major legislation until the atmosphere is clarified. Even in the highest quarters of the Administration there was lack of knowledge of the extent of damage done by the Supreme Court decision. Officials who never before lacked confidence in their plans appeared like men drugged, uncertain of themselves and the future. For the day, at least, life has been taken out of the New Deal.

Waiting for Reaction.

All looked to President Roosevelt for guidance. Silent, but grim-faced, he struggled with the problem throughout the day, but was not ready to speak when nightfall came. Perhaps he will say nothing for another day or two until he arrives at definit e conclusions, it was explained at the White House.

Mr. Roosevelt consulted with close advisers by telephone as they analyzed the situation which had broken over them like a cloudburst. He conferred in person with Senator Pat Harrison and Representative Robert L. Doughton, in charge of the now obsolete NRA extension legihlation. He also conferred with Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America.

Leaving the White House, Green said: "Labor has assumed a waiting attitude for the moment." It seemed that also was the attitude of the Roosevelt Administration—

NRA Ban Baffles Wall Street; Stocks Plunge From 1-6 Points

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

New York, May 28.—Stocks and commodities cracked under heavy trading today as Wall Street's confusion over the NRA decision increased. Only the utilities, in the stock market, managed to hold above the previous close as 2,310,000 shares were exchanged. The general list was 1 to more than 6 points lower, with metal shares leading the decline.

In the first hour tickers constantly were behind the market as 840,000 shares rolled into the trading pits, while in the fourth hour tickers got behind the market as much as three minutes and quotations were abbreviated as a liquidation wave rolled in.

This accompanied sharp breaks in cotton, sugar, rubber, copper and other commodities which directly have been affected by codes.

Outlook Confused.

The result tonight was a confused outlook with traders' timid at making new commitments. Not only is there the NRA situation to be considered, including possible new legislation from Washington and voluntary codes, but there also is the French politico-financial situation. The Government of Premier Pierre Etienne Flandin today presented its demands to Parliament for financial dictatorship. Debate was delayed until later. The fate of the government—and possibly the future position of the franc—depends on the outcome of this test.

The stock market, meanwhile, was the scene of almost complete confusion. Opening found blocks of 1,000 to 4,000 shares rolling out. There was a tendency to firmness with utility shares in the van. But this lasted only half an hour.

Then the so-called "code" stocks began to be sold. Copper shares started it. Liquor shares turned weak, for there is the chance of serious price cutting in this industry. Oil shares flopped, for there was the possibility of new gasoline price wars, already hinted at from California. Motor shares gave ground. Steel shares, representing companies which have benefited by code orders, turned easy.

Cigarette Prices Cut.

Trading turned dull and rails finally started a rally. There was the hope expressed that the President's transportation message, expected before the end of the week, would contain something cheerful for the carriers.

In addition, April earnings made a better showing than had been expected.

But this firmness was only a temporary sedative. In the fourth hour metal shares again turned weak as United States Smelting broke more than six points and the entire list started toppling. Rails had to give up the strength they had shown in the previous hour. Tobaccos weakened as some New York tobacco dealers started the price cuts on cigarettes which were quieted when the cigarette code became effective.

The final hour found trading comparatively quiet, but there was no rally save in individual issues.

Half a Billion Works Fund Made Available

Roosevelt Signs Order for $528,093,600; Bulk for Highways Projects.

By the Associated Press.

Actual funds for more than half a billion dollars worth of projects under the new works relief program, were made available last night as the President signed an executive order covering part of the approved plans handed him by the advisory committee on allotments.

The division of information, under Frank C. Walker, announced this final move in the complicated works set up, but was unable to explain why all projects handed to the President were not approved.

New details were listed last night for $8,610,600 which the Navy Bureau of Yards and Docks will spend for repairs and construction at Navy reservations.

The largest item was $400,000,000 for highway and grade separation projects. The Reclamation Service received $5,000,000 for flood control works and $6,000,000 was made available for administration expenses.

Other items included $250,000 for eradication of the Dutch lem disease; $500,000 to the Forest Service for emergency conservation work; $446,500 for construction of highways in Alaska, and $100,000 for administrative expenses in the works progress division under Harry Hopkins.

Still lacking presidential approval were a quarter million in housing projects, $100,000,000 each to Wisconsin and the new Resettlement Administration under Rexford G. Tugwell, and the allotment of $140,000,000 to the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

The advisory committee has approved projects worth $1,247,162,300 at its two sessions, and of these the President tonight passed out $528,093,600.

American Messiahs

By The Unofficial Observer

(Copyright, 1935, Simon & Schuster, Inc.)

Installment XI—The Rover Boys at Armageddon

This is the eleventh installment of "American Messiahs," by the Unofficial Observer, author of the "New Dealers," which appeared last year. While "American Messiahs" does not necessarily reflect the editorial opinion of The Post, it is commended as a most candid discussion of the mavericks, the reformers and the radio spellbinders now booming their way across the American political stage.

Given a situation in which there is a constant demand for at least one good deed a day, the Boy Scout is at a premium in American politics. Where a man like Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre wears his frat pin on his diplomatic pyjamas, and Phi Beta Kappa supplies the keys to the City of Washington, there must be men who will go on political hikes with F. D. R. and light a fire with one match at the end of the trail.

Such are the La Follettes, of Wisconsin, in our present contact with the foes of the Lord at Armageddon. They are pivot men in politics, sitting securely on the hinges which link the swaying left-wingers with the stable Easterners. If there is something wide-eyed and glad-handed about the La Follette technique it has not prevented them from staking their claim to the precise spot at which the New Deal intersects with the Western revolt. They are the only men who can make the New Deal seem revolutionary to the Westerners and they are the only men who can make revolution seem respectable to the New Dealers. They may possess the wisdom of the dove but theirs is also the innocence of the serpent. After all, in the books, the aboriginal Rover Boys invariably worsted the bully and came out on top of the pile.

Theirs is the perennial youth of juvenile thrillers—the only authentic political dynasty in modern America.

Theirs is also the morale which goes with adherence to a single political creed—the Wisconsin Idea. This was the life-work of their father—"Old Bob" La Follette—who emerged from the trust-busting and rail-baiting of the Granger revolt of the '90s as Governor of Wisconsin in 1900. His creed was simple: that "the will of the people shall be the law of the land" and that economic democracy is attainable by political means. The means which he devised for Wisconsin made the State university a sort of service station for scientific administration.

Farm Aid Loss Spurs 3 Billion Inflation Plan

Frazier, Lemke See Little Hope Despite Request for Reargument.

By the Associated Press.

A new inflationary bill yesterday stepped out of the wreckage of the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium act.

Chief developments surrounding the law which the Supreme Court on Monday smashed as unconstitutional were:

Senator Frazier and Representative Lemke, both North Dakota Republicans, said they would press for passage of their bill to issue three billion dollars of new currency to refinance farm mortgages.

Members of Congress generally doubted that the old Frazier-Lemke moratorium act could be patched up.

Fear was expressed in some congressional quarters that farmers in some sections of the country might resort to force to retain their mortgaged properties.

To Ask Reargument.

Lemke said he would ask the Supreme Court to allow the moratorium law to be reargued.

The new financing bill, which would take over mortgage indebtedness of the farmers and allow them 47 years to pay it off at 3 per cent interest, already has been approved by both Senate and House agriculture committees.

"We are going to press harder than ever for that bill," Frazier said. "The law passed on by the Supreme Court never was intended to be anything but a stopgap until the refinancing law could be put through," Lemke added.

The Representative said he had received telegrams from farmers in Ohio, Indiana, North and South Dakota, Nebraska and Kentucky, some of them warning "they will take care of themselves and protect their property."

"Of course," Lemke said, "I hope it won't be necessary for any of them to have to resort to force to save their farms.

"The think to do is to salvage them—not to run around hunting 6 per cent. That was what the law was for."

At about the same time Walter Singler, president of the Wisconsin milk pool, was saying in Milwaukee that:

"If the decision has retroactive effect, I'm afraid it will mean trouble in this State. Farmers I talked to are surprised and chagrined."

Frazier Has Little Hope.

Frazier saw little hope of redrafting the mortgage moratorium bill so as to make it constitutional. He said:

"The Supreme Court evidently closed the door to legislation that would take care of the situation and save the farmers' homes." Both he and Lemke were studying the situation to see if a bill could be drafted to meet the objections by the court. Lemke put it this way:

"We are working to see if we can take care of the 6 per cent coupon clippers suggested in the opinion and also what can be done, if anything, to save a million farmers from the wreckage."

The Representative said he felt he could convince the court, if granted a chance to reargue the case, that the controlling section of the Constitution was the power granted Congress to write bankruptcy laws—not the fifth amendment which the court held the law violated.

8 Billions in Mortgages.

Official figures showed there were outstanding upward of $8,000,000,000 of farm mortgages, over $2,500,000,000 of which are held by the farm land banks and the land bank commissioners. Over half of these have been refinanced, officials contended.

Five and a half billion dollars of the farm mortgages were reported still held by insurance companies, banks, private individuals and mortgage companies.

The Farm Credit Administration said figures in its possession showed that foreclosures of farm mortgages through bankruptcy proceedings were fewer in the last two years than in 1927, usually regarded as a normal year. The figures were: 1934, 4,716; 1933, 5,917; 1927, 6,296.

Between You and Me

Glee Over NRA's End May Be a Bit Premature; Business Wants Codes; State Lines Fading.

By Raymond Clapper

MOST of the gleeful cheering over the Supreme Court's wrecking of NRA, and, what is less apparent to the casual reader, its drastic tightening of the interstate commerce clause, is quite likely to prove premature.

Throughout the country, editorial writers are sitting in their insulated ivory towers rhapsodically thanking God for the Supreme Court and for, as they put it, the restoration of the Constitution.

Later on they may want to revise their remarks.

The prospect is that the country will for a time attempt to operate NRA on a voluntary basis. Business leaders all over the country are urging that. Even the head of the United States Chamber of Commerce, which was in convention here so recently viewing with alarm urges that the essentials of the codes be carried on by common consent.

This cry is significant. It reveals that in spite of complaints over specific policies, in spite of the stupidities of NRA administration, which were numerous enough, and in spite of its unwise attempt to extend its activities further than a centralized administrative agency at Washington could reach effectively, thoughtful business men long ago had come to realize that the basic ideas of NRA were necessary. They had tried, aided by official winking at the anti-trust laws, to put some of these ideas into operation. They do not want to go back to industrial anarchy now.

A voluntary NRA, however, probably will be as short-lived as were the pledges not to cut wages, which business leaders made at the Hoover White House conference after the stock market crash in the fall of 1929.

Business leaders are urging their respective groups to show that business can be self-governing. Senator Hastings, one of the most conservative of Republicans, says it can be done. If it can, many difficulties will have been solved, but the chances are against it. A cigarette war has begun in New York already. Liquor prices are being slashed. If the chiselers have so reformed that they will go along, then the millennium has arrived and of course we won't need any government at all.

The better guess is that it won't work any longer than a revival meeting keeps the village drunk on the water wagon, and that before the snow flies the country will be clamoring for President Roosevelt to step in and do something.

Those who think that natural forces will take care of the situation if left alone overlook, as Prof. Corwin points out, that even the Tories don't entirely trust in the operation of natural forces, but wear suspenders.

• • • •

It is unfair for those who are disappointed with the decision to blame the Supreme Court. Although the court went counter to the centralizing tendencies of John Marshall and sharpened State lines again, it has a written Constitution to deal with. The Constitution contains just so much rubber and no more. It is idle to quibble with the court for not shutting its eyes to the English language. The court can not be expected to say the Constitution means yes when it says no.

• • • •

Talk of blackjacking the court by enlarging its membership collapsed when all nine justices joined in the decision. That subterfuge of packing the court, a weak and uncertain one at best, becomes ridiculous to think of now.

Other proposals, more seriously considered, include suggestions that Congress have the power to reenact legislation over a Supreme Court veto and that in such cases the court could not for a second time override. It is like the British House of Commons method of overcoming a House of Lords veto.

But such suggestions do not overcome the fact that a written Constitution exists. They are essentially schemes to get around the supreme law of the land. Eventually the Constitution would become a mockery, a funny old curiosity like George Washington's coach.

More serious thought is being given to the only sound course in the long run—amendment of the Constitution to bring it into line with modern conditions, on the theory that the Constitution follows the economic fact. The court has, through judicial interpretation, followed the economic fact about as far as it can without rupturing the plain language of the document. Alteration of the language, not by judicial construction but by amendment, appears to many the inevitable alternative to sabotage by subterfuge.

For instance, the Supreme Court's strict interpretation of the interstate commerce clause, holding that mining, manufacturing and growing crops are local activities, that wages and hours regulations in such activities can not be touched by the Federal Government, may be proper construction of the language of the Constitution. Still we know that a cut of wages in a textile factory in Connecticut affects textile factories in Massachusetts. The wheat belt and the cotton belt spread over State lines. Farmers in one State are affected by what farmers do in other States as we have been hearing through 15 long years of clamor for Federal farm relief. In every direction business, labor and agriculture operate without regard to State lines. Your copper mine out in Arizona pays its dividends to owners in New York. Prices at some gasoline filling station out on the prairie and the wages of the attendant probably are fixed in some city office building 1,000 miles away.

State lines served well enough in the early days when travel and transportation were slow, when the majority of the people never went beyond their county line, when each community, as each household, was practically complete unto itself, and when manufacturing was in the small handcraft stage like the shoeshine parlor of today. But the State line has become almost imaginary except in the law books. Most of the States can't even feed their people without getting the money from Washington.

• • • •

And if the Supreme Court is going to insist on a strict construction of the interstate commerce clause it is going to be on the spot some day.

National banks are protected from robbery by Federal law. Smart yegs keep away from national banks and tap State banks only. That keeps the Federals off of their necks. But some time a bank robber is going to make a mistake and crack a national bank. Then he is going to hire a smart lawyer who will carry the case to the Supreme Court and argue that robbing a bank is not interstate commerce, that Uncle Sam is unconstitutionally interfering with his personal liberty.

• • • •

Meanwhile there is still the possibility that the Supreme Court could save the country much trouble by delivering its vetoes as a President does, instead of sending someone to jail and then telling him a year or two later that the Government can't do that to him.

For years Massachusetts has in effect done exactly this. When the Legislature is considering a law, it can ask the State Supreme Court for an advisory opinion. Occasionally this also is done in Maryland, but unofficially and off the record. The Federal Government already has moved in this direction with adoption of the declaratory judgment law two years ago. Under that act, a petitioner can bring a test case without having actually to violate the law to find out whether he can be sent to jail. The Kerr-Smith tobacco act and the hog-processing tax are being tested in this manner now in the lower courts.

• • • •

The Supreme Court caught the District of Columbia trucking code authority off guard. On the same newspaper page that yesterday carried accounts of the wrecking of NRA appeared an advertisement inserted by the trucking code notifying operators of trucks for hire that:

"The trucking code, signed by the President, is in full force for the second code year. The following requirements are contained in this law: Annual registration; display of insignia; filing of rates; maximum hours for labor and minimum wages. Truckmen are requested to register immediately for the second code year and comply with all other provisions of the code."

One nationally prominent NRA champion was more fortunate. He was booked to deliver a speech Monday night to a code group, and his prepared manuscript ended on the following note of assurance:

"You can feel secure that the gains you have made will not be lost, that your code is secure, that for all the Big Black Wolf may huff and puff against your NRA house of refuge, it is built of bricks and not of straw and sticks, and that it is not going down this season."

After reading the newspapers he had to throw it all away.

Engineer Takes Stand At Conowingo Hearing

Baltimore, May 28 (AP).—Paul L. Holland, chief engineer of the State Public Service Commission, occupied the stand today at the hearing on the rates, valuation and affairs of the Conowingo Power Co.

Holland described to the commission how he had personally inspected much of the physical property of the company and arrived at his estimate of its replacement value. This is the second week of testimony, and the hearing was expected to continue for probably another week.

AAA Abandons License Drive In Both Houses

Amendments Withdrawn, May Be Buried; Davis, Wallace Silent.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Caught in the same constitutional whirlwind that grounded the Blue Eagle, the AAA yesterday virtually abandoned hope of rescuing its marketing agreements and concentrated on saving all that it can of the New Deal farm program.

Officials privately conceded that, while the AAA was not directly in the line of Supreme Court fire, the decree that bowled over the NRA can hardly fail to have a "highly persuasive" effect on lower courts in their rulings on AAA licenses and possibly other provisions of the farm act.

In some quarters, the opinion was held that the marketing agreements and licenses, affecting thousands of farm producers, already are dead, to all intents and purposes. Neither Secretary Wallace nor AAA Administrator Chester Davis saw fit to make a public statement, but from high sources came word that "we're going ahead with 90 per cent of our program."

To Rewrite Amendments.

Both Wallace and Davis were closeted much of the day with Administration leaders on Capitol Hill and members of their own legal staff. Out of these meetings came a decision to withdraw the pending AAA amendments from the Senate floor—and to rewrite them in committees of both Houses to bring the AAA more into conformity with the Supreme Court ruling.

The woried smiles of AAA leaders reflected an element of tragic frustration in this move. After more than a year of bitter debate, the AAA had finally succeeded this week in bringing forth its amendments in both Houses. It was to be a banner week in AAA history.

Instead, Chairman Marvin Jones of the House Agriculture Committee withheld the amendments from the House floor, despite the fact that the way had been cleared for him, and a short while later the Senate recommitted the same amendments to the corresponding group in that chamber.

Entire Program in Danger.

This course was determined upon in a conference attended by Wallace, Davis and Seth Thomas, Solicitor of the Department of Agriculture and a group of Congressional leaders including Senate Majority Leader Joe Robinson, Senator Ellison D. Smith and Representative Jones, chairmen of the two agriculture committees.

It was agreed that the licensing and marketing agreements as provided in the amendments are subject to question, and that the remainder of the AAA program rests largely on court interpretation of the delegation of authority by Congress.

"We'll have to see what can be worked out," Jones declared. "We can't tell until we've gone over all questions."

Senator Robinson expressed the opinion that "both features of the Schechter poultry case decision—namely, standards to be set up for licensing and the clear limitation of the operations to interstate commerce or to transactions that directly affect interstate commerce—are involved.

The only part of the farm program directly hit by the Supreme Court ruling were eight codes jointly administered by the AAA and the NRA—a comparatively insignificant feature of the adjustment administration.

These include the poultry code for the metropolitan area of New York City—the code passed on in the Schechter case—and a fair competition agreement for the grain exchanges. This latter code, by far the most important, restricted fluctuations in grain prices and otherwise regulated the exchanges.

Processing Taxes Jeopardized.

Roughly, the AAA is divided into four component parts, each of which may be affected to a more or less degree by the Supreme Court decision.

The AAA codes were made unenforcable immediately by the court decision. Secondly, officials are frankly doubtful if the AAA licenses can now be made to hold up in court. Third, the AAA administers the Bankhead cotton control act and the Kerr-Smith tobacco act, both of them special laws now under attack in the courts.

Fourth, and by all odds the largest part of the program, is the adjustment plan, under which processing taxes are levied and benefit payments made on wheat, corn-hogs, cotton and a number of other "basic commodities." The heart of this phase of the farm plan is the processing tax, which is likewise under attack.

75 Licenses in Effect.

AAA officials conceded that the licenses used to bolster marketing agreements have fared poorly in the lower courts, decisions in most cases being against them. At present the AAA has 75 of these licenses in effect, the majority of them covering milk. Exclusive of milk, the AAA estimated on May 1 that its marketing pacts embrace 5,444 handlers and 216,966 producers.

It was considered certain that in re-writing the AAA amendments the congressional committes will drastically curtail the licensing authority vested in Wallace. It was this point, the contention that Congress delegated its authority too loosely in the original act, that prompted the AAA to propose the amendments in the first place, it was said.

Certain of the congressional leaders consider even more important the provisions of the House AAA bill setting up a fund of $100,000,000 to be used for promoting farm exports. This is a return to the McNary-Haugen two-price proposal, whereby the Government would remit to farmers the difference between artifically maintained domestic prices and the prices they receive for exports.

Meantime, a direct Constitutional ruling on the AAA is expected to come this fall when the Supreme Court returns to the bench from its summer adjournment. At least four cases involving various features of the farm program are on their way up from the circuit courts, and one of them already has been set for review.

This latter case concerns the Bankhead cotton control act, which was upheld in the lower court. The suit was brought by Lee Moore, Texas producer, against the Texas & New Orleans Railroad for not accepting cotton without tags specifying that the act had been complied with in its production.

Another case is expected to come from Boston. In this instance, the Hoosac Mills Corporation is challenging the constitutionality of the processing tax, which likewise was sustained by a lower court.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 28.—Forty-one farmers of the five States in the Baltimore Land Bank District have taken advantage of the Frazier-Lemke bankruptcy act, Charles S. Jackson, president of the Federal Land Bank of Baltimore, said today.

Jackson said approximately $200,000 in land bank and land bank commissioner's loans was involved.

The cases were started by petition for composition under subsection "C" of section 75 of the bankruptcy act, which is a necessary preliminary before filing of a petition under subsection "S," commonly known as the Frazier-Lemke act, he said.

"All of our cases are pending under the composition provisions of section 75," Jackson said, "and none have reached the point of an adjudication in bankruptcy under subsection 'S' of section 75."

States in the district are Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Virginia.

He was stricken with a heart and asthmatic attack at his Berkeley home two weks ago, and removed here the same day.

Insect Hunt Proposed To Jaded Society Girl

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 28.—Miss Leona Jay, the "personable young woman weary of social hokum," who in a newspaper advertisement sought to finance a hunting or scientific expedition, has found someone with an idea.

Miss Jay admitted having no previous interests in insects, "but I've read so much about their destructiveness and the millions the Government spends trying to get rid of them I thought if we brought back pictures scientists might be able to work something out that would be of benefit to the civilized world."

The photographs, for which both a motion-picture camera and a microscope will be used, will be donated to museums and colleges, she said.

Senate Passes Pure Food Bill; None Votes 'No'

Modifications Allay Foes of Measure; Passage by House Predicted.

By Robert C. Albright.

Modified to overcome sharp Senate objections, but still rigidly regulating the manfacture, shipment and sale of foods, drugs and cosmetics, the Copeland pure food bill yesterday unexpectedly slipped through the Senate without a dissenting voice.

Passage followed complete rout of a more drastic measure, sponsored last session by Undersecretary of Agriculture Rexford Guy Tugwell, and apparent sidetracking of more limited regulations at the present session.

The approved measure, conferring wide powers on the Secretary of Agriculture, and reputedly carrying the indorsement of President Roosevelt, now goes to the House, where the Interstate Commerce Committee will open hearings in a few days. House passage was generally forecast by Senate sponsors.

Opposition Allayed.

Stiff opposition to the measure by Democratic Senators Bailey, North Carolina, and Clark, Missouri, and Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, was withdrawn at the last minute, after the Senate Agriculture Committee, reconsidering the bill, adopted amendments satisfactory to the foes.

Foremost of the modifications is a provision for multiple seizures of misbranded foods and drugs only in cases where the misbranded article can be shown to be "imminently dangerous to health." In other cases of misbranding, only one sample may be seized by the Agriculture Department. This change was a concession to Senator Bailey, who had bitterly opposed multiple seizure features of the original bill.

The bill specifically prohibits adulteration, misbranding, false advertising or false labeling of any food, drug, device or cosmetic in interstate commerce.

$10,000 Maximum Penalty.

False advertising would be punishable only through civil action in district courts, with a maximum $1,000 penalty, if the violation did not involve danger to health, gross deception, or was established only by opinion evidence. In cases of wilful violation, however, maximum penalties of $10,000 or three years' imprisonment were provided.

Liability for false advertising would rest on the manufacturer, packer, seller or distributor who furnished the advertisement; but publishers, radio broadcasters or advertising agencies would be required to furnish the name of the party supplying the ad.

The revised bill sets out a short list of a half-dozen diseases for the treatment of which no so-called curative drug or device may be advertised. The list includes Bright's disease, cancer, tuberculosis, infantile paralysis, venereal diseases, heart and vascular diseases.

Drug Definition Widened.

Definition of the term "drug" was broadened to include substances intended for diagnostic purposes, articles, other than foods and cosmetics, affecting the structure or any function of the body, and all substances recognized in the Homeopathic Pharmacopeia of the United States.

Two committees, one on public health and another on food standards, would be set up to formulate regulations affecting poison content, preparation and precautionary labeling of foods, drugs and cosmetics. The first of these groups, to be chosen by the President on basis of scientific attainments, would advise the Secretary of Agriculture on formulation of regulations.

The committee on food standards would be composed of seven members, three selected by the President from the public, two from food industries, and the remaining two chosen by the Secretary from the Food and Drug Administration, would advise the Secretary on food standard regulations. In either case, approval of a majority of the committee is requisite to the formulation of regulations.

In the light of the Supreme Court's blow at congressional delegation of authority, Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, author of the bill, defended power delegation to these groups as "in nowise unusual in Federal and State legislation."

"In each instance," he said, "the subject matter here dealt with is so complex and involves such ramifications in the constantly varying production and traffic in food, drugs and cosmetics that it is impossible for Congress to undertake the detailed consideration necessary to the formulation of each needed provision."

Senator Clark, who had sought a wider measure of Federal Trade Commission jurisdiction, withdrew his objections rather than hold up the measure, he said. An amendment was added, however, providing that nothing in the bill shall be "construed to impair or diminish the powers of the Federal Trade Commission under existing law."

Ohio Girl Wins Spelling Bee With 'Interning'

Second Place Goes to Boy From Niagara Falls; Peoria Lad Third.

A $500 prize hung in the balance for ten breathless minutes yesterday while a tall, slender girl from Ohio and a fair-haired little boy from Niagara Falls, N. Y., tilted for the spelling championship of the United States, after 18 other spellers had been eliminated from the National Spelling Bee.

With a glibness that elicited murmurs of admiration from the audience in the new National Museum, Paul D. McCusker spelled "flageolet," "finesse," "harass," "hemorrhage" and a score of other tricky words without faltering, but he injected an "e" into "interning," and lost the match to Clara Mohler, of Coventry, Ohio.

Clara corrected Paul's spelling, and then, as the rules provide, spelled the next word on the list correctly, winning the prize of $500. This was "intelligible," a far easier word than she had spelled in the latter stages of the bout, for previously she had mastered "heinous," "palliatives," "pantomime," "magnetos" and other tongue-twisters.

As winner of second place, Paul received $300. Third prize, $100, went to Bruce Ackerman, of Peoria. Each of the other 17 contestants received $50.

Newspapers are Sponsors.

The prize money is awarded by the newspapers which sponsor the National Spelling Bee annually. The champion represented the Akron Beacon-Journal; Paul McCusker entered the contest as the winner of the Buffalo Evening News spelling bee, and Bruce Ackerman was sent to Washington for the finals by the Peoria Journal-Transcript. The last half-hour of the match was broadcast over WJSV and a Columbia network of 75 stations.

Rachel Mussetter, The Washington Post entry, was accompanied to Washington by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Mussetter, of Henderson's Corner, Md., the entire eighth grade class in Gaithersburg High School, Miss Mildred Lutes, her home room teacher, and T. W. Troxell, principal. Rachel, who ten days ago won the Maryland-Virginia championship which made her eligible for the national match, had spelled many difficult words correctly in the earlier contest, but yesterday she stumbled on "sincerity," placing an "e" after the "r".

The Gaithersburg girl was the first Maryland pupil ever to take part in the national bee, which is now in its eleventh year, and was sponsored this year for the first time by The Post. She received a 12 volume Encyclopaedia Britannica Junior from The Post for her victory in the area match and $50 in yesterday's contest. This money, she said yesterday, is going to be put away to accumulate interest for the time when she graduates from high school and studies nursing. She and her brother, John, will join the other contestants and their companions in a round of sightseeing all this week.

Humorous Incidents.

Humorous incidents, splendid sportsmanship and breathless moments marked yesterday's match.

Given the word "bald," Margaret Karle, the Passaic (N. J.) Herald News entry, asked for a definition. Dean George B. Woods of American University, chairman, explained graphically, "bald, like the top of my head," but Margaret spelled it "balled" and went out of line.

Ten minutes before the match went on the radio, with eight spellers in line and only four permitted to go on the air, Audrey Bobey, the Louisville Courier-Journal, contestant, was taken ill and the match went on without her. Officials and friends asked her to give up, as she was faint and wan, but she was determined to go back in line, spelled the words given her to compensate for her absence and was successful for several more rounds.

When the contestants had been reduced to seven, two boys and five girls went through 26 rounds of difficult words before anyone went down. Besides the three winners, this group included Genevieve Ries, Des Moines Register & Tribune; Rosalind Dubrovner, Memphis Press-Scimitar, and Elizabeth Mathias, Albany Evening News and Knickerbocker Press. Elizabeth finally broke the deadlock when she spelled "buccaneers" with a single "c".

How to Pronounce 'Khaki.'

Dean C. E. Hill of George Washington University, and Dr. H. E. Warner, principal of Hine Junior High School, alternated as pronouncers. Dr. Warner sent the judges into a conference with Webster and Funk & Wagnall's when he pronounced "khaki" as "kocky." Genevieve Ries obviously did not recognize the word, but gambled on the latter. The judges, Belmont Farley and T. D. Martin, both of the National Education Association, and the Rev. James S. Montgomery, chaplain of the House, resorted to the dictionary, confirmed Dr. Warner's pronunciation and agreed also that there was no such word as Genevieve had spelled.

Duncan Corliss, Burlington Free Press contestant, weathered two words distinctly associated with feminine interests, "crochet" and "pongee." His next word was "flunked" and he grinned broadly as he spelled it correctly, but later he went down on "bicycle," which he spelled "bycycle."

Others taking part in the match, and the names of the newspapers which sent them to Washington, were Helen Gronas, Detroit News; Anne Slifka, Hartford Times; Bernard Campbell, Jersey Observer; Virginia Chimeri, Nassau (Long Island) Star and Review; William Kurtz, Plainfield Courier - News; Margaret Heaton, Portland Evening Express; Elizabeth Calamito, Wheeling Daily News; Mildred Welsh, Wilmington Morning News and Journal - Every Evening; Betty Zeigler, Youngstown Vindicator, and Kathleen Hester, Louisville Times.

Survey Places U. S. Air Power At 18,000 Men

Unofficial Check Shows Potential Fleet of 12,000 Planes.

By the Associated Press.

A potential air power of 12,000 planes and 18,000 pilots—a mixture of specialized fighting ships and men, and less-adapted civilian ships and pilots—was disclosed yesterday in an unofficial survey.

A fraction of the civilian armada, primarily the large and swift commercial transports, and a somewhat larger percentage of the civilian pilots could be incorporated swiftly, authoritative sources said, with the 4,400 fliers and 2,900 planes making up teh tarined fighting forces.

Bulwarking this corps was a potential reserve strength of about 15,000 civilian student aviators and a fleet of ships available for primary training service.

6,855 Planes Licensed.

The Air Commerce Bureau reported 6,855 licensed and 1,950 unlicensed airplanes—a total of 8,805—many of which might be converted into use in war time for transportation if not for combat service.

Licensed pilots recorded at the bureau number 13,886, including 359 women. Licensed student pilots at 18 approved private flying schools total 14,816. In addition, there are the aviation students of the Army and Navy schools undergoing highly skilled training.

Of the 13,886 licensed private pilots, 7,083 are transport fliers, most of whom would be eligible to fly the big bombers and similar size craft in wartime. There are 933 limited commercial, 5,142 private, 720 amateur and 8 industrial pilots.

The Army has 1,403 officer pilots; the National Guard 152; Coast Guard 40. There are, said Maj. Gen. B. D. Foulois, chief of air corps, around 600 Army-trained air pilots without jobs and 365 aviation cadets in training.

1,026 Navy Fliers.

Rear Admiral Ernest W. King, chief of the Navy's aeronautics, listed 1,026 naval aviators, including 104 trainees and 10 warrant officers; 114 Marine Corps pilots, including 6 trainees and 2 warrant officers. In addition, there are 514 naval, Marine Corps and volunteer reserve air pilots.

The Navy has an enlisted aviation force of 13,388 and the Army 14,465, about 2,000 of whom form part of the crews on big bombing craft as gunners, bombers, radio men and mechanics.

Present aircraft strength of the Army was put at 1,387, exclusive of 150 for the National Guard. The Navy has in operation and "in sight" 1,193, exclusive of the 166 assigned to the naval reserve and including Marine Corps craft.

Flying wings of both the Army and Navy have been voted large sums by Congress for the coming fiscal year, $45,600,000 for the Army and $40,804,000 for the Navy.

TVA Sponsors Rush to Cover Danger Points

McSwain Denies NRA Case Is in Mind but Plans Special Study.

By the Associated Press.

A minute scrutiny of Tennessee Valley Authority legislation—past and proposed—with a view to patching up any parts that might be vulnerable to attack on grounds of unconstitutionality, yesterday was projected by the House Military Commtitee.

Chairman McSwain said he thought the Supreme Court's NRA decision did not affect TVA. But he added, without specifying, that questions might be raised as to the constitutionality of some TVA activities and that he would ask the committee to check these in detail—possibly later this week.

In the Senate, meanwhile, Norhis (Republican), Nebraska, charged opposition was due in part to a desire of the American Aluminum Co. to have a monopoly on water in the valley "as they have on aluminum throughout the world."

Charges "Economic Sin."

He said testimony, given the House committee on his bill redefining TVA powers, by Arthur B. Davis, chairman of the aluminum company, was "misleading" and contended it would be "an economic sin to give the Norris Dam to private contractors."

"They want to hold up the dams," Norris said, referring to the aluminum company, "until they see whether they want to build them, maybe 50 years from now.

"This great corporation, greater than the Government, says the TWA has bought two pieces of land it some day may want. They simply want a monopoly of water in the little valley as they have on aluminum throughout the world.

"And yet the exaggerated report has gone out holding up TVA as a monster trying to beat this poor, poverty stricken company, contrilled by Mellon.

Anti-TVA Strengthened.

Norris said the Aluminum concern was "Andrew Mellon's company," and that it had been held by a United States court to be a trust and a monopoly in restraint of trade, but had "never been punished because it was too big."

Several House Military Committee foes of the TVA planned to raise constitutional objections to the Senate-approved Norris amendments.

One of the anti-TVA leaders, Representative May (Democrat), KKentucky, contended the NRA decision had strengthened the position of the opposition group in the committee.

"We have decided," he said, "to continue our opposition until the decision of Federal Judge W. I. Grubb, of Alabama, which said that the TVA was not authorized to sell power in competition with private industry, has been tested in the Supreme Court."

The Norris bill would give TVA definite authority to market surplus power and raise its bond issuing capacity from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 for purchase of existing power facilities in its area. It was tabled by a 13-to-12 House committee vote.

D. C. Officer's Alleged Killer Under Arrest

A trail that began almost three years ago when Policeman George W. Shinault fell before the gunfire of a colored desperado was believed ended yesterday with the arrest in Philadelphia of Willie Bullock, 32, the suspected slayer.

It was Shinault who fired the shot which killed William J. Hushka, a bonus-seeking veteran, in one of the riots of July 28, 1932, which preceded the eviction of 15,000 bonus marchers by Federal troops.

Scarcely three weeks later Shinault was slain, allegedly by Bullock, when he and Patrolman R. P. Edwards answered a radio call in the 100 block of F street northwest.

Detective Dispatched.

Bullock's arrest in Philadelphia follows an assault on another Negro on May 25. Chief of Detectives Frank S. W. Burke dispatched Detective Sergt. John W. Wise to question him. Wise took with him photographs of fingerprints which were found in the house where the slaying occurred.

Responding to a "trouble call" here in August, 1932, Shinault went down an embankment to enter a house. As he neared the door a shot rang out. Shinault and Edwards retreated, so that they could be shielded by the police car.

Killer Escaped.

Shinault had been wounded in the first outburst of fire and he crumpled to the street. He died soon afterward. Edwards ran into the house and arrested a group of colored persons. It was then he learned that the killer had escaped through a back door.

Since that time, detectives have hunted Bullock in various cities in the East. Bullock was indicted here for first degree murder less than three weeks after the killing.

Russian Dirigible Takes On Cargo During Flight

Moscow, May 28 (AP).—A dirigible was successfully loaded and unloaded in the air today.

Flying at 150 feet, the ship let down a rope which, dragging the ground, contacted a holder and picked up a bag containing cargo. The bag was equipped with shock absorbers.

After bouncing along the earth for several yards, the cargo was hoisted to the dirigible. Glass jars of food were intact. Experiments in lowering cargo were similarly successful.

Poisoned Tonic Kills Mother and 4 Children

Corner Brook, Newfoundland, May 28 (AP).—A mother and four children were dead today and two other children were critically ill—believed to have been poisoned by a home-made "spring tonic."

The seven were brought here from their home in the village of Howley and five died in the hospital. Hospital attaches said they understood the family, named Roberts, had been suffering from influenza and all had taken the tonic.

Only the father and one son escaped.

N. Y. Editor Speaks At Mary Baldwin

By the Associated Press.

Staunton, Va., May 28.—Speaking to the graduating class of Mary Baldwin College on the accomplishments of woman, as exemplified in the work of such leaders as Jane Addams, Dr. John H. Finley, associate editor of the New York Times and former university president, said women should be educated not solely for their country's good but also for their own good.

Women not only do 90 per cent of the teaching of children, but they now are also the chief teachers of the liberal arts. It is sensible then to give women an education equal to the best education for men," the speaker said.

The president of the college, Dr. L. Wilson Jarman, presided over the graduating exercises and conferred degrees upon the 34 candidates for bachelor of arts degree.

4 Bystanders Shot in Ohio Labor Violence

Pickets and Company Men Clash at Canton as Strike Continues.

By the Associated Press.

Canton, Ohio, May 28.—Gunfire punctuated Canton's labor turmoil again today and four persons, one a woman, fell wounded.

Violence flared near the United Alloy Co. plant, a Republic Steel Corporation subsidiary, where a unit of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers went on strike last midnight.

Spectators and strikers were wounded or injured as pickets and company guards clashed off company property. Adjt. Gen. Emil Marx, at Columbus, named Col. William Marlin as National Guard observer at Canton.

Meanwhile, Sheriff Abe Laird, of Tuscarawas County, requested troops to protect approximately 2,200 clay products workers who, he said, are being harassed by mob violence prompted by strike agitators.

Governor Refuses Plea.

Gov. Martin L. Davey refused, however, to send troops, after conferring at Columbus with National Guard observers, who told him the sheriff had as many as 14 men on duty at various times.

The Governor said if the sheriff "can not enforce law and order he should be removed."

The strike at the White Motor Co. in Cleveland, affecting approximately 2,400 employes, ended today after prolonged negotiations. The men will return to work tomorrow.

At Cincinnati about 2,000 workers returned to the Chevrolet and Fisher Body plants.

Mrs. Mary Reed, 22, was seriously wounded about the ankles and legs as she stood with a group of spectators observing pickets near the United Alloy plant in Canton.

Describes Shooting.

Miss Mildred Evanitch, 17, who said she stood within a few feet of Mrs. Reed, declared two autos occupied by company guards sped toward the group on a road which borders company property.

Miss Evanitch said shotguns blazed from the cars without provocation. The autos then swung around and sped back to the factory, she said.

Henry Marchewka, 23, sustained a minor gunshot wound in the neck.

John L. Motts, 44, an Alloy employe at work in his garden near the plant, received a leg wound from stray shots. Sam Davis was wounded earlier in the day by buckshot which he said was fired by a company guard from a fast-moving auto that left the company yard.

Boy, 5, Gassed.

Mario Carozza, 5, was treated for tear gas after a gas bomb was tossed on the porch of his parents' home.

B. R. Buxser and George Polen said guards slugged them with lengths of iron pipe. Virgil Testa was treated for tear gas.

Hostilities yesterday in the vicinity of the Berger Manufacturing Co., also a Republic subsidiary, where a strike also is in progress, resulted in bullet wounds to three and injuries to nearly a score of others.

Threat to Close Plants.

A threat to close the Berger and Central Alloy plants came today from A. R. Turnbull, mayor of Canton.

In a statement issued today, officials of the Berger Co. blamed "radicals" and men not in its employ for a large part of the turmoil.

Sheriff Joseph T. Nish, of Stark County (Canton), placed deputies late today around the five local plants of the Republic Steel Corporation. He said he instructed them to prevent company guards from leaving company property.

Veterans' Bloc Now Is Asking Revised Bonus

Senate Poll Begun to Find What Chance Any Type of Measure Has.

Subordinating inflationary demands of the Patman bill to full bonus cash payment through any medium, a subdued veterans' bloc yesterday started a poll of the Senoat to determine if bonus legislation has any chance of passage this session.

The Senate poll followed a rally of House and Senate Patman bill sponsors in the office of Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma.

At about the same time the bonus drive took another tangent on the other side of the Capitol. Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), New York, obtained 33 signatures on a petition to force a House Republican conference on June 3 to consider ways and means of paying the bonus out of the $4,880,000,000 work-relief fund.

The two developments were in sharp contrast and contributed to the confusion into which the bonus movement was projected by the President's Patman bill veto and the Senate's sustaining vote.

Pro-veteran members, of the Patman-Thomas school favor payment of the bonus, but not out of the works fund. At yesterday's conference in the Oklahoma Senator's office, it was indicated that group might support a compromise embodying alternative methods of full payment—not including the works fund proposal.

To sound out the sentiment of the Senate, the membership of the Senate was divided up into eight parts, and each of the Senators attending the Thomas conference was assigned a segment to poll. Thomas himself took a list of 14 Senators, 7 who had voted for and 7 against the Patman bill. He was not encouraged by his first contacts, and admitted last night that several Senators who had voted for the Patman bill are now uncertain about reviving the bonus issue.

Senator Thomas, who had originally held out for the Patman bill "because it would put new money into circulation," said he is now placing the bonus issue foremost, and is laying only secondary stress on expansion requirements.

"I believed the Patman bill would have benefited the country as a whole even more than the veterans," he said. "But I will not allow that wish to stand in the way of any full bonus settlement."

He said the plan under consideration is to offer whatever bonus legislation has the most favorable prospects as a rider on some legislative bill. Only a majority of the Senate would be required for passage.

The President, however, has stated flatly he would veto even his social security bill if any bonus measure were attached as a rider.

Members of both Houses attending yesterday's Patman-Thomas bonus conference appealed to veterans not to join in the agitated bonus march on Washington.

House Republicans who voted for and against the Patman bill were among the 33 who signed the Fish resolution, favoring paying veterans out of the works fund. This proposal also has the support of a large bloc of conservative Senators of both parties.

Strike Threats Given by Labor In NRA Crisis

that he did not believe it had been affected by the NRA decision. After his conference with the President, Green said labor would adopt a waiting attitude.

Lewis, in discussing the impending coal strike, said that operators, due to a breakdown in the price scale as a result of abandonment of NRA codes, could not make any future commitments.

He pointed out that coal represents 35 per cent of the freight carried by the railroads and that a general bituminous strike would affect 60,000 railroad men, as well as 400,000 miners. Lewis said that in April no railroad had more than 42 days' supply of coal above ground and that he believed this supply had now dwindled to only enough to last 20 days. He said if the strike lasts a month or more railroads would be tied up.

"Robbed of Security," He Says.

"The NRA decision robbed mine workers of their last vestige of security," he said.

He said, however, there was hope in the Guffey bill, putting mining under Government control, and expressed the opinion that the measure was not affected by the decision, at all events, not by the delegation of power ruling.

"Fundamentally, the future of all labor depends on its power to organize," he said.

Perhaps no industry will be so seriously affected by abandonment of codes as that of bituminous mining. Under NRA the coal fields were divided into districts with price and marketing agreements in each district. Boards were established for the purpose of maintaining a competitive situation.

The wage agreement between miners and operators expired April 1, but at the insistence of the NRA it was continued until June 16.

When the joint wage committee of miners and operators met yesterday a sub-committee reported that no agreement was possible and recommended adjournment. Instead, a recess of a few hours was taken and when the meeting reconvened it was agreed the situation was hopeless.

Mine workers have not receded from their demands for increased pay and shorter hours, while a majority of operators contend that even the present wage and hour levels can not be maintained.

In discussing the textile situation, Gorman said that the gravest danger of a breakdown is in the South.

"That is where, under the code, there was most violation," he said. "It is reasonable to expect the first outbreaks of guerrilla warfare there.

"We want no strikes. We want peace. But our members will be better off fighting for their rights than submitting to slaughter without protest."

Senator Black (Democrat), of Alabama, held out his 30-hour week bill as a solution of labor difficulties. He said he had anticipated an adverse decision by the Supreme Court.

"I took the position," he said, "that Congress could not turn over to business men the right to make their own laws.

"But the court has not held that Congress does not have a right to pass a law controlling interstate commerce as provided in my 30-hour-week bill. The decision has strengthened my belief that the 30-hour-week bill is within the Constitution."

Senators Disagree.

Other Senators, however, disagreed. Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, said that if the court's objections applied to the NRA they certainly applied to the Black bill. Senator Hastings (Republican), of Delaware, said the decision was "clearly applicable to the 30-hour-week bill."

In advancing his labor disputes bill, Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, said he was convinced the decision "did not cast any serious doubts upon the propriety of enacting the national labor relations bill." He pointed out that the bill delegates no legislative power.

Blue Eagle's Creator Silent as to Its Fate

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, May 28.—The creator of the Blue Eagle couldn't be coaxed into a eulogy over his bird today.

Charles Coiner, who got his inspiration during an airplane trip and designed the bird symbol that flew everywhere from coast to coast for nearly two years, has no views on the fate of his creation—that is, none he'll express.

Coiner regards his part in the recovery campaign as purely artistic and mechanical. "I see no connection between my position, and the Supreme Court decision," he said.

to resist the pressure against the franc and the state's credit."

Borrowing Planned.

He revealed that the government must borrow 15,000,000,000 francs (about $960,000,000) during the year Of this, 7,000,000,000 already has been authorized, not including 1,500,000,000 for military expenditures.

He blamed the franc's plight partly on the tense situation caused by Germany's re-armament, devaluation of Belgium's currency and general world unrest.

Scant applause greeted his speech, most of it coming from the right and center benches. Danger of the government's overthrow apparently was enhanced as the Radical Socialists displayed strong hostility.

Germain-Martin accused "international speculators" of attacking "gold bloc moneys" and turning against the franc after being checked "by Holland's and Switzerland's defensive measures."

Stocks Drop Fast After NRA Ruling

One of these was General Motors, which in a late climb went to 32¼ for five-eighths gain on the day, but it carried no strength into other automotive issues.

The market gave no answer to the future. The confused situation likely will continue, particularly in view of the fact that Thursday is a holiday in trading. However, Wall Street still maintained that the long term outlook was favorable.

Artist's Model Loses Suit Against Barbour

New York, May 28 (AP).—Rita Martini, artist's model and actress, today lost her $100,000 suit against Robert Barbour, president of the linen thread company and brother of United States Senator W. Warren Barbour of New Jersey.

Supreme Court Justice John L. Walsh dismissed the case on the ground the 23-year-old girl had failed to prove her charge that Barbour whipped her insensible in his penthouse apartment on September 3, 1932.

The court, who heard the case without a jury, acted after defense witnesses had corroborated Barbour's assertion that he was in Great Neck, Long Island, on the date mentioned.

Baltimore Child Drowning Victim

Emmitt McCann, 12, First Lower Potomac Victim.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., May 28.—Lower Potomac waters took their first swimming victim of the year tonight when Emmitt McCann, 12, son of a prominent Baltimore family, was drowned as he and about 14 schoolmates from Leonard Hall, a parochial school here, swam in Breton Bay.

The accident occurred as McCann, who was to have graduated from grammar school in a few days, dived off an old wharf into 4 feet of water and became stuck in the mud. He was under water 5 minutes before he was brought to the surface by Harris Sterling, 13. Artificial respiration was applied almost two hours under the supervision of a local physician.

The boy's mother is traveling in Europe, but relatives were located late tonight. An inquest returned a verdict of accidental drowning.

HOLC Resumes Activity; Pool $1,750,000,000

President Signs Act; Fahey Reveals Fifth of Old Loans in Arrears.

With President Roosevelt's signature affixed yesterday to the act extending loaning powers of the Home Owners Loan Corporation by $1,750,000,000, that organization immediately began preparations for resuming lending activities.

Steps will be taken at once, John H. Fahey, HOLC chairman, indicated, to complete action upon 283,889 applications for loans received prior to last November when the organization ceased accepting applications, and have been approved tentatively.

Under the new law, application may now be received for a period of 30 days from date of the President's signature. Fahey said that because there seems to be a greater tendency on the part of insurance companies and banks to lend money on real estate mortgages, he did not expect a great deluge of requests for loans.

One-Fifth Now Overdue.

Applications for loans, Fahey pointed out, will be accepted only from home owners who are clearly in distress. Only home owners involuntarily in default on private loans are eligible for Government aid.

At the same time, Fahey revealed that approximately 20 per cent of the payments now due on loans already made are 90 days or more in arrears. On April 30, he said, installments due on principal and interest amounted to $148,403,582, of which $28,852,762 has been due for 90 days or more.

In only 44 cases have mortgages actually been foreclosed, he said, but there are 342 additional cases pending and the number is increasing at the rate of about 40 per week. He said of the total number of instances in which foreclosure proceedings have been brought, 115 were cases in which owners deliberately defaulted or had refused to make payments. On the other hand, he said, "a considerable number" of mortgagors had paid their indebtedness in full.

Management Is Planned.

A special department is being set up to manage property acquired by the Government through foreclosure. The property either will be sold or it will be held and rented until an advantageous sale can be made. Fahey denied reports that the HOLC is planning to set up a separate corporation to handle this property.

In the first two years of its existence the HOLC has made 862,073 loans totaling $2,600,820,136. In all, it has received 1,743,398 applications. Of this number, 590,000 were rejected or held in suspense. Some of those held in suspense may be revived, Fahey said. This leaves 283,889 approved applications on which no loans have been made.

Some shifting of personnel will be necessary, it was announced, because of a provision of the new law requiring that employes must be residents of the States in which they work. Fahey said that as many employes as possible working outside their home States would be transferred to offices in those States.

Safety Body Hails Cut In Car Deaths to 9,540

Chicago, May 28 (AP).—The National Safety Council today estimated that 2,360 persons lost their lives last April in motor vehicle accidents in the United States—a substantial decrease from the 2,540 deaths in April, 1934.

Automobile fatalities for the first four months of 1935 were 9,540, a sharp decline from the 9,900 deaths in a corresponding period last year, but far above the 7,913 loss for the first third of 1933.

Most of the April improvement was in small towns and rural regions, with the death rate rising in cities. Urban communities of more than 500,000 population had an increase of 7 per cent.

New York Reporter To Begin Jail Term

New York May 28, (AP).—Martin Mooney, a newspaperman who refused to divulge the source of information he used in a series of articles on gambling, tonight was ordered to begin serving a 30-day jail sentence and pay a $250 fine for contempt of court.

Mooney's attorney, to whom he was paroled, was ordered to deliver Mooney to the sheriff for immediate serving of the term.

Meantime Louis "Cock-Eyed" Weiner, charged with compulsory prostitution, was held under bail of $100,000, a sum bitterly protested by his counsel.

Assistant District Attorney Morris Brody said Weiner "is another vice lord, on a par with Nick Montana."

Mendieta Will Not Seek Cuba Presidency Again

Havana, Cuba, May 28 (AP).—President Carlos Mendieta stepped out of the coming presidential campaign today a few hours after Miguel Mariano Gomez, twice Mayor of Havana, became the first announced candidate as Mendieta's successor.

Mendieta said "in no wise and for no reason will I become a candidate for the presidency" in next winter's elections.

The newspaper Avance, close to the Mendieta government, said the campaign would narrow down to a fight between Gomez and Mario G. Menocal, former president.

In 1906 he moved on to the United States Senate, where he remained until his death in 1925, fighting the "interests" year in and year out. He held aloof from Teddy's Progressive revolt in 1912 but led another himself in 1924, as a means of advertising the persistence of the Wisconsin Idea in darkest normalcy. His death left both the Idea and the La Follette dynasty securely established in the North Central region of the United States and in the American tradition of politics.

For some 30 years Wisconsin has been the most progressive State in the Union and has spread the fame of the La Follettes throughout the English-speaking and democratic world. Under the leadership of the La Follettes, Wisconsin has been the Nation's legislative proving ground. The erstwhile "radicalism" of the elder La Follette is the orthodox Republicanism of today. This has been the normal course of procedure: First, some "lunatic fringe" group or party proposes; second, the La Follettes take it up and try it out in Wisconsin; third, in due course of time the Nation follows, after denouncing the La Follettes as dangerous innovators.

As a result, there is nothing of a fly-by-night character in the La Follette tradition and the Wisconsin idea, nothing demagogic, nothing fascistic. Where Huey Long will have to disinfect himself with the radicals and where Olson will have to prove the staying power of the Farmer-Labor movement, the La Follettes are dealing with a tested and acceptable political force. As a matter of fact, the La Follette tradition in Wisconsin has been stabler, more constant than the tradition of either major party. The Democratic Party could nominate a John W. Davis in 1924 and a Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932 and still remain the Democratic Party. The Republicans could skip from a Theodore Roosevelt to a Warren G. Harding, and from a Coolidge to a Hoover, and still be Republican, but the Wisconsin Idea remains, after 30 years, still the Wisconsin Idea—not a static program, but a theory of progress through democratic processes, not a day-dream but a series of concrete achievements. The La Follette tradition has become so much a part of American political folklore that its disappearance wuold be like the end of the passenger pigeons or the clipper ships.

While everybody has been talking about forming a third party, the La Follettes have been doing something about it. They formed one in 1934, and for purely practical reasons. They were not sure they could win in the Republican primary, because so many of their old followers had been won over to the Democratic Party. They were not sure they could win in the Democratic primary, because not enough of their followers had swung over. Their best chance was to form a third party which would assure them a place on the final ballot. It was a risk but they won, leaving them in a position to swing the liberal votes of their State in the most effective way, for or against a national third party candidate.

They have not swung so far to the left as did Olson and the Farmer-Laborites in 1934; perhaps they were wise, for the Farmer-Labor group swung a little too far and had to back-track. Nevertheless, it has left Olson in a position to make a bid for national third party leadership, although he might find it difficult to get the Eastern labor support the La Follettes could command. Phil La Follette, despite his refusal to take a job under Roosevelt, will have to shift over to the left again in order to differentiate himself from the New Deal. With one member of the family in and one squatting on the borders of the New Deal, the La Follettes may be in a strategical position, but only on the assumption that they are right in playing their game on the theory that the great break-up will come in 1940 at the end of Roosevelt's second term. One of the La Follettes is much more likely to be nabbed as a Vice Presidential candidate to make a victory for someone else—the Democratic Party or a third party—than to lead the movement. By 1940, one of the two brothers—Phil and Bob—may be strong enough to lead, but Roosevelt could probably run with Bob as a Vice Presidential candidate without turning in a riot call in 1936. It might offend some of the old-line Southern Democrats, but Bob would not alarm the Eastern conservatives more than Roosevelt has already alarmed them. In fact, he might alarm them less, for he is slower, steadier, and stays put, whereas they are never sure what Roosevelt will do next.

This is because Roosevelt has all the privileges of genius, including the right to change his mind, where the La Follette boys are more concerned with being the heirs of a great tradition than with magnetizing the following which creates traditions, and smashes them.

"Young Bob" La Follette, now aged 40, never wanted to go into politics. He wanted to be a banker. He tried to run away from politics but his father haled him back and held him to the family tradition as though it were a family curse.

Robert Marion La Follette, jr.,—to give him his correct name—has been in the Senate for almost ten years, and all by accident. When his father died in 1925 the family held a council. Phil, the younger brother, had been regarded as "Old Bob's" logical successor. He had some of the traditional La Follette flair and personality, where Young Bob was more staid, less dramatic. But Phil was two years under age for the Senate, which threw the choice between Mrs. La Follette, sr., and Young Bob, who was a few months beyond the constitutional minimum age of 30. He was designated to run, made his campaign and was elected to complete his father's term. In 1928, year of the Hoover landslide, he was renominated and reelected. And in 1934, as the candidate of the new Progressive Party, he was elected once again—this time in a three-cornered fight against Tory Republicans and the Old Deal Democrats.

Few men have had a better training for service in the Senate than Young Bob. As a boy he imbibed the atmosphere and talk of the Wisconsin Idea in the Governor's mansion at Madison. When his father came to Washington, Bob spent most of his spare time watching the Senate in session listening to his father. He attended the University of Wisconsin for a time but was forced to discontinue his college course on account of illness. When he returned to Washington, his father was just entering the worst of his periods of ostracism because of his futile efforts to keep the United States out of the World War. These efforts were accompanied by flaming speeches which stand out as prophecies in the cold gray light of the nineteen thirties. What La Follette, Lindbergh (the pacifist father of the flying colonel who married the daughter of a Morgan partner), Norris and a few others saw then is now generally recognized and is the main driving force behind the movement to assure American isolation by bans on loans to nations at war, embargoes on the export of munitions, and revision of American policy so as to substitute neutrality for "friendly neutrality."

At the time, La Follette was branded as "pro-German" and cries arose for his expulsion from the Senate. Just then Young Bob became critically ill with pneumonia and for weeks the old Senator spent most of his time at his eldest son's bedside, snatching sleep when he could on a cot in the same room. When Young Bob pulled through, the old man made him his secretary and there the boy remained for six years. His duties were largely political and he served for a time as chairman of the Wisconsin State Republican Committee. During his father's campaign tours, he talked to the politicians while his brother Phil practiced speaking to the crowds. In 1924, he was vice chairman of his father's campaign for the Presidency on a third-party ticket, and learned some of the statutory pitfalls by which entrenched State political machines have rendered a new party movement virtually illegal—a consideration which is shaping his course today.

Then, in 1925, he succeeded to his father's seat in the Senate, virtually by inheritance—an interesting commentary on the validity of the democratic priciple for which his father fought. Slight of figure, with plastered-down black hair, short and direct in manner, Young Bob is a sober, undramatic figure in comparison with his father. His speeches are not exhilarating, although they are as full of meat as a coconut. He seldom speaks until he has mastered his subject, and few men in the Senate are more intelligent students of public affairs.

Yet even though the tradition of personality is somewhat diluted, the tradition of the Wisconsin Idea is carried on in full force by Young Bob. For ten years George Norris has looked upon him with dim and fatherly eyes as the great Progressive hope for the future, and he has given the Republican Party plenty of opportunity to speculate on the persistence of the Progressive spirit. In the Republican national convention of 1928—that bossed and bewildered assemblage which was responsible for inflicting Hoover on the Nation—Young Bob arose, as his father had done at convention after convention, to preset the Wisconsin program and to protest agaist the majority recommendations of the platform committee. At first he received a few of the jeers and hisses which had regularly greeted his father, but when, after reading his minority report, he reminded the convention that 32 out of the 35 planks presented to the convention of 1903 by his father, 20 years before, had become law, he gave the Republicans something to think about. They applauded him when he finished with a heartiness which was a novelty to a La Follette from such a gathering.

Until the depression, Young Bob's Senate accomplishments were nothing to write home about. He voted with the agrarians and other progressives on most questions. In 1929 he was one of the leaders of the Progressive-Democratic coalition against the Hawley-Smoot tariff in its original horrible form, although the final law was nothing to view with pride. Among his chief exploits was the abolition of secret Senate sessions to consider executive appointments. Among his other projects were an investigation of labor troubles in the anthracite region, a resolution to prevent the use of Federal Reserve credit for speculative purposes, and a resolution to study the extent of unemployment and ways of relieving it.

His real chance came with the depression, which he rightly regarded as a challenge to democracy and not as an interesting problem in financial manipulation. He stepped to the front at once with an investigation of its causes and cures and his plan for setting up an economic council—later partially realized through the NRA and the AAA. With Wagner and Costigan, he was first in the Senate to arrive at an intelligent diagnosis of the depression and the first to present means of combating it. With those two Senators, he led the fight for unemployment insurance, for a large public works program and for Federal relief to the unemployed.

It was significant that he was more active in his studies and proposals for dealing with the industrial end of the depression than with the agricultural end. The agricultural program advanced by the Western farm leaders to deal with the post-war depression was pretty well established when he arrived in the Senate, and he supported it, despite its inherent inconsistency as a program for subsidized dumping on the theory that it would benefit us to export surplus farm products without reference to imports. He saw what the majority of the farm leaders did not see, that the solution to the major problem lay in industry and finance. Under his guidance, the La Follette program once again became—or remained—a national, not a sectional, program.

In 1932, following the example of George Norris, the La Follettes supported Roosevelt and Young Bob was called into Roosevelt's councils to help with the unemployment relief and public works bills. On the whole he has supported the New Deal, and his variations naturally have been to the left. He fought unsuccessfully for larger public works appropriations. He, Costigan and Wagner wanted five billion dollars or more in 1933 instead of $3,300,000,000; they wanted eight instead of four billion in 1935. He never loses an opportunity to propose higher income and inheritance taxes—though nothing really confiscatory, as proposed by Long—but has shown lamentably little interest in proposals designed to alter the administration of the income tax laws so as to make them less exasperating to the people in the middle brackets.

Roosevelt has teamed consistently with the La Follettes—he'd better, as they represent his real grip on the Middle West—and in 1934, after they formed their third party, he went to Green Bay to make a speech which would help Young Bob. He gave Bob a big smile and mentioned his name in a pleasant manner—which was meant to constitute an indorsement—but at the same time he took a veiled crack at Phil, running for Governor, who had refused to be lured into taking a job under the New Deal. However, the crack was generally thought to be aimed at Borah, who was then much more in the public eye, so no harm was done. Finally, on the eve of election, Roosevelt telegraphed Bob to come and see him immediately after the votes were counted, an invitation that Bob used with the permission of the White House, to wind up his campaign. Both the La Follettes were triumphantly elected in Wisconsin—Phil for Governor, Bob for Senator—which suggests that Roosevelt needs the La Follettes more than they need him.

Bob came to the White House ventre a terre, and was let in on the $4,880,000,000 work relief program, then being hammered into shape. Both the program and the invitation tickled him; he has been privy to Roosevelt's outline of his plans for the future of the New Deal (and it would sound pretty grand to any liberal), so Bob has remained loyal to F. D. R. When Burt Wheeler broached the subject of forming a progressive bloc to work toward the formation of a third party, Bob replied that he thought that the time wasn't ripe yet, that Roosevelt "still has several rabbits in his hat." Bob voted for the McCarran amendment which tied up the big work relief bill, but when the issue came up again, he voted the other way, explaining that while he thought prevailing wage rates ought to be paid, the most important thing was to get the money appropriated for work, and that some of those who voted for prevailing wages were in fact trying to knock work out altogether and force the appropriation down to a mere dole.

That is the measure of Bob. He is a practical politician who has very little personal ambition. So far as he is concerned, the New Deal has not caught up with the Wisconsin Idea, and Bob has not moved fast enough to keep from being overhauled. Like Norris, he will stand up for his principles and deal a blow for them when he thinks it will be effective, but will go along with Roosevelt so long as Roosevelt is liberal. If it comported with his principles to play the Wheeler and Long game of keeping out in front, he is smart enough to do it, but he is too intelligent, too conscientious, to support a man like Long, and is far from convinced that Wheeler, who conceals his Socialist principles under the motley of Free Silver and Prairie Trust-Busting, is the answer to the national riddle.

He trains along with Roosevelt, faute de mieux, and, as one cynical liberal put it, "Franklin D. is going to be too smart for Young Bob.."

510,000 Miners Ready to Quit Roosevelt Told

waiting for the country to give its reaction. Should that reaction disapprove of the wiping out of NRA, it was believed Mr. Roosevelt would ashume a dramatic, vigorous leadership—with a plea to save the gains of the New Deal and prevent retrogression in social and economic reform.

Before the President met the labor leaders—with whom he canvassed all aspects of the situation—negotiations which had been in progress since last Febraury over a wage scale for bituminous coal miners in the Appalachian region definitely broke down. Lewis announced that unless a wage contract were achieved 450,000 coal miners would strike June 17, thus eliminating employment for another 60,000 railroad workers.

Rumbles of labor discontent over the Supreme Court's action were general. Green conferred hastily with members of the A. F. of L. executive council, but no decisions were reached. Francis J. Gorman, vice president of the United Textile Workers, said his followers wanted "no strikes," but he added the ominous warning that "our membership will be better fighting for their rights than submit to slaughter without protest."

House Cuts Off Gloating.

On Capitol Hill, the House took a hasty adjournment, apparently to shut off the opportunity for Republican gloating over death of NRA. In the Senate pending AAA amendments were sent back to committee to be brought into conformity with the Supreme Court decision. Possibility existed the proposed amendments, dealing with licensing of handlers of foodstuffs, might never again reach the Senate floor.

Officials of the FACA, however, virtually gave up the ghost of life, asserting their authority over the liquor business had been wiped out by the high tribunal. Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee summoned his committee for tomorrow to discuss that problem. It was thought the Federal hold on the liquor, wine and beer industries might be saved by operating under the revenue and pure food and drug acts.

The Senate engaged in a brief debate of the court decision, with sponsors of such legislation as the Wagner labor disputes bill, the Black 30-hour week bill and the Bankhead cotton control act insisting that these measures were not affected by the new ruling. But many lawyers, including some of the closest advisers of the Administration, were fearful they were in error.

Many business leaders regarded the Supreme Court decision as a catastrophe, while others hailed it as a spur to ultimate recovery. Harper Sibley, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, appealed to business and industry to observe hours and wages prescribed by codes and a like plea was made by the National Association of Manufacturers, that organization subsequently reporting that at least 200 large firms had posted notices to employes that there would be no change.

The International Association of Blue Print and Allied Industries, meeting at Chicago, voted to continue its code authority for another year, while its officers said the industry would maintain NRA wages and working conditions.

Tidewater Oil Co. and Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey announced 5 per cent wage increases, while many large manufacturers informed their employes that wage and hour schedules established under NRA would not be disturbed.

Textile mill owners in many instances announced a desire to observe NRA provisions, while the association for the woolen industry called on its members to maintain the status quo. The Cotton Textile Industry Institute's code committee issued a hurried call for a meeting here today for formulate its attitude.

The automobile industry likewise was urged to maintain all code provisions. Andrew W. Mellon's Aluminum Co. of America announced it would stand by its code, for the time being at least. The movement in this respect was general throughout industry.

Pledges Cheer Officials.

These evidences of support for the defunct NRA cheered officials here, but they expressed realization that such good intentions could not be kept if the chiselers in each industry sought to take advantage of their opportunity to reduce wages and thus undersell competitors. It is the small minority in each industry that refuses to conform to practices desired by most, it was contended, which makes any voluntary form of action difficult to achieve.

One incident of abolition of the five-day week was reported. The Wichita Gas Co., a Henry L. Doherty subsidiary, announced reversion to the six-day work week and abandonment of observance of other NRA practices. In New York a cigarette price war broke out when several stores offered standard brands at 11 cents a package. A department store offered cigarettes at 99 cents a carton.

A liquor price war also was reported from New York, while there were reports that retail automobile dealers, freed from code provisions, were bidding up allowances for used automobiles, regardless of prices set forth in the trade manual.

Wall Street's reaction to the collapse of NRA was confused. The day started out with a brief upward rush of prices, only to meet widespread selling and a price recession from $1 to $6 on shares, chiefly those of companies benefited by the NRA.

Redfern, Missing Flier, Again Reported Seen

The State Department revealed last night that James L. Park, vice consul at Colon, Panama, had sent word that Paul Redfern, Georgia aviator who has been missing several years, had been reported seen alive in Dutch Guiana two weeks ago.

The report said that the aviator was badly crippled. Park's informant offered to rescue the man he claimed is Redfern, provided arrangements could be made before June 14.

The State Department said reports that Redfern was alive have persisted ever since he disappeared on a South American flight.

Presbyterians Fail to Change Stand on War

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, May 28.—Commissioners to the 147th general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. today delayed for a year proposals to remove from their church's confession of faith a sanction of war "on just and necessary occasions."

They declared "unalterable purpose" in behalf of "adequate unemployment insurance;" decided to seek abolition of unemployment; favored insurance "against social hazards, illness, and old age; stood against child labor, and condemned "the usurption of legal procedures which leads to such baneful result as lynching."

Inquiry Ordered.

Deciding against delay, they ordered immediate investigation by a special committee of a fundamentalist-modernist controversy in the presbyteries of Philadelphia and Chester, Pa.

Backed by student conscientious objectors to war, the assembly considered a petition from Cuyuga Presbytery, New York, to eliminate from the church confession of faith a phrase asserting Christians "may, now under the new testament, wage war upon just and necessary occasions."

A standing committee recommended that the proposal be sent down to the 262 presbyteries of the church. A majority vote of those bodies would have legalized the change. The assembly, however, adopted a substitute plan to refer the proposal first to committee for a year's study.

Against "Exploitation."

The assembly declared it is "firmly against every form of human exploitation." It called for formation of committees on social welfare throughout its presbyteries and synods to further its pronouncements.

With but another day of its sessions remaining, it upheld the assembly of 1934 in ordering dissolution of the fundamentalist independent Board of Presbyterian Foreign Missions. It rode down petitions to end disciplinary actions brought against those failing to sever relations with that opposition board.

Housing Aid Sees Boom in Building

Permits up 118%, Colean Tells Architects.

By the Associated Press.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 28.—Americans are building homes at a rate assuming boom proportions, Miles L. Colean, of Washington, technical director of the Federal Housing Administration, said here today.

Speaking at the sixty-seventh annual convention of the American Institute of Architects, Colean said that residential building permits for the first four months of 1935 surpassed those of the corresponding 1934 period by 118 per cent.

"Low cost housing construction is advancing so rapidly that it is estimated that the year's outlet will be from $500,000,000 to $700,000,000, as against $300,000,000 in 1934," he said.

Pierre Blouke, Washington, of the reconditioning division of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, told delegates that the corporation had saved 700,000 homes.

Air Coyote Killer Is Dead in Crash

By the Associated Press.

Glendo, Wyo. May 28.—The "coyote killer of the clouds" is dead.

He was Al Lucas, Wyoming Air Service pilot, who perished when his heavy plane splintered against the side of a lonely sage-sprinkled hillside near here during a fog. He flew the mail between Cheyenne, Wyo., and Billings, Mont.

He owned a private ski-equipped plane. In the winter, he would drop down fro mthe sky, skim along snow-crusted plains and kill the coyotes with his rifle.

A crack shot, Lucas would bag as many as 75 in a winter. Sale of the hides and bounties on the coyotes made it a profitable pastime.

Publishers' Code To Be Liquidated

Functions to Cease After Expiration Date, June 16.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 28—The daily newspaper publishers' code committee, after a meeting today, issued a statement asserting "affairs of the code committee will be liquidated promptly" after expiration of the newspaper code June 16.

Reviewing the situation caused by the Supreme Court decision wiping out codes, mentioning efforts made to extend NRA and referring to the pending Wagner labor dispites bill and the Black 30-hour week bill, the committee's statement concludes:

"Publishers are therefore confronted by problems relatively as troublesome today as those created by the enactment of the recovery law in 1933. Meanwhile, they should keep these facts in mind:

"The daily newspaper code expires on June 16 next. After that date publishers will have no right to display the Blue Eagle. The functions of the newspaper industrial board also cease on June 16, 1935.

"The affairs of the code authority will be liquidated promptly. Any future action in code matters will depend upon further congressional action."

Utility Bill Is Cut To Court Pattern

By the Associated Press.

The group further decided that no company should be ordered to carry power of another company over its lines, except upon application of a State commission or the power company involved.

The action of the sub-committee is subject to full committee approval.

In The Wake Of NRA.

Legal enforcement of the NRA codes having been suspended, American business and industry are once more the arbiters of their own destiny. There is no disposition in official circles to question the finality of the Supreme Court's decision. In fact, efforts are being quietly concentrated upon liquidation of the code system as it has existed for nearly two years.

This does not mean—indeed it must not mean—that the benefits brought by the blue eagle will be suddenly wiped out. In the beginning the NRA was conceived as a great cooperative movement through which private enterprise could foster economic recovery. The New Deal made the fatal mistake of entangling voluntary cooperation with unworkable and illegal regimentation. As pointed out by the Supreme Court, the codes involved "the coercive exercise of the law-making power," in violation of the fundamental law. But this does not necessarily mean that the standards and enlightened business practices established under NRA will be destroyed.

While the Administration is considering its next move, leading industrialists are already making arrangements to continue many of the code practices on a voluntary basis. Along with their greater freedom they have acquired greater responsibilities. The prompt statement to this effect by Harper Sibley, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, indicates that these obligations have made a lasting impression upon business circles. No doubt it is realized that the elimination of child labor and sweat-shop wages promote recovery while eliminating social cancers. Certainly, NRA has made the public conscious of many industrial plague spots, and it is not to be supposed that they will again be tolerated merely because the legal framework behind their abolition has been swept away.

The chief objectives sought by the NRA have been found to be not enforceable in law. But many of them are nevertheless highly desirable in practice. If industry is ready to accept the new responsibility thus thrust upon it, the constructive aspects of the codes will not be permitted to lapse. Even though the conduct of the Recovery Administration appeared crude and blundering at times, it has steadily pointed the way toward greater cooperative effort in the solution of industrial problems. Intelligent business leaders will automatically follow this lead.

Any other course might give rise to disastrous consequences. Organized labor will not relinquish without a struggle the advantages it has gained under the recovery act. Any widespread tendency to cut wages or lengthen working hours beyond code standards would probably culminate in a series of embittered strikes, thus jeopardizing the recovery which business has asserted could be expected once governmental restrictions were lessened.

No doubt the Administration will evolve a plan for encouraging and assisting voluntary codes of fair competition. It appears reasonably certain that the basic idea behind the NRA will be an important factor in future industrial organization. Forward-looking business leaders may be expected to plot their immediate course on that assumption.

The Man Lawrence.

Not so long ago an editorial on the death of Lawrence of Arabia appeared on this page. Somewhat similar comments were printed in other newspapers throughout the world. Practically all of them carried the same vignettes of his defense of the Arabs, his uncanny knowledge of military strategy, and his remarkable book and translations. Most of these editorials were apparently written, as Lawrence himself termed it, with "pretensions toward design," and were heroic outlines rather than flesh and blood accounts of him as a man.

As if to mock gently the extravagance of phrases called forth by his demise, Lawrence wrote his own epitaph, which has been published posthumously by his friend, Robert Graves. Here Lawrence proved himself a master at brevity, frankness, and a sly, grave humor. He has left biographers without a leg to stand on. Delicately debunking all theories that he translated Homer's Odyssey because of any passion for Greek or the classics, he states simply that he did it because "the dollar stood high" and he had run out of money.

Too late does he instruct those editorial writers who dwelt mainly on his saddle-and-saber days by expressing a post obit desire that his endeavors for peace "should weigh more than the fighting." Scorning credit for his one-man organization and leadership of the Arabs, he says in this remarkable self-styled "epitaph" that he is convinced "progress today is not made by a single genius, but by a common effort."

Regardless of Lawrence's modesty, however, he was and will always remain one of history's most romantic figures. The sudden purposelessness of his death has served to emphasize the fact that he was a man whom the world could ill afford to lose. Yet it is hard to vision him, who loved speed, excitement and color, as a man grown quiet and slow-moving in old age. That he would have chosen an early death to aged debility is perhaps indicated in the prophetic words of his own obituary: "It's stopping short that needs skillfulness."

Check To The Demagogues.

When Adolf Hitler was ready to assume supreme control in Germany it was not necessary for him personally to abolish parliamentary institutions. He merely asked the Reichstag, already predominantly composed of members of the Nazi Party, to surrender powers so that Der Fuehrer could absorb them.

Obediently the German national legislature voted to adjorn sine die. Since then Hitler has held his arbitrary way unchallenged. The Reichstag, like the Italian Chamber, today exists only as a coterie of "yes-men," who are occasionally called together to provide a stage setting when the national dictator wishes to make some statement in a particularly dramatic manner.

The vast and historic importance of the Supreme Court decision in the Schechter case is that it has built an insurmountable barrier to any similar drift toward dictatorship in the United States. For a long time various domestic tendencies in this direction have been obscured by the fact that no reasonable person could visualize our genial President in the role of a dictator. Since Mr. Roosevelt is obviously a most sincere admirer and stanch supporter of democracy—so ran the argument—only partisan critics or vicious detractors could see in his policies any trend toward arbitrary rule.

This was a half-truth of the sort which has frequently prevented whole sections of human society from taking steps which would have averted political degeneration. Of course no reasonable observer has ever visualized Mr. Roosevelt as having the slightest desire to wield the scepter of tyranny. On the other hand there can be few discerning Americans who have failed to notice the tacit encouragement which some New Deal measures have given to assaults upon the basic structure of our government. What is the fundamental reason for the feverish, if transient, reception accorded to Upton Sinclair, Dr. Townsend, Huey Long, Father Coughlin and lesser-known rabble-rousers? Simply that the present Administration has whetted the appetite of the unthinking by intimating that wishes may become horses if the orderly processes of the Federal system are broken down to centralize power in the hands of an omnipotent executive.

There have been signs lately that the President has come to realize the dangers inherent in raising hopes which can not possibly be fulfilled. Certainly in his veto message on the bonus bill he showed unmistakable desire to dissipate the idea that government can accomplish whatever humanitarian instincts may indicate to be desirable.

But the emotions which have been aroused in the mass of American citizens are very strong. The public has suffered greatly. Suffering, it has seen that there are many whom the depression has touched lightly, if at all. It has been taught to believe that if only certain inequities could be swept away, and if a benevolent paternalism could be substituted for the harsh and often unjust conditions of our complicated economic society, then would America become a paradise. And it is just because the Administration has promised so much that the demand for more has of late become a swelling chorus. Under such pressure most elected officers will either increase their promises, or give way to those who will. In either case the road leads straight to the point where, Utopia being at present unattainable, the dictator steps in to still the clamor of democracy by force.

It was at this point, with that future changing from possible to probable, that the Supreme Court intervened. In a unanimous opinion, so clear that every person of average intelligence can understand it, so vital that every citizen should read it, the nine justices agree that Congress has gone too far down the road the German Reichstag took. In the words of the Court decision, there has been "a delegation of legislative power unknown to our law and utterly inconsistent with the constitutional prerogatives and duties of Congress."

Whatever temporary dislocation that verdict may cause to the Administration, none should be more grateful for it than the man who is today the chief trustee of American civilization. It is not merely that some of the awful responsibility on the shoulders of President Roosevelt is lightened by this decision. Even more important for his record in history is the way in which this unanimous opinion of the Supreme Court fortifies him both against the vicious attacks of demagogues and the ill-advised promptings of irresponsible friends. He has been handed the perfect answer to the radio artists who say so glibly what should be done. Just how does their advice conform with the rulings in the Schechter case?

This decision should put an end to panic legislation. It need not for one moment terminate constructive reform. The justices were at some pains to point out that "extraordinary conditions may call for extraordinary remedies." They only insist that "the recuperative efforts of the Federal Government must be made in a manner consistent with the authority granted by the Constitution."

In this there is nothing which need dishearten the President or impede the essential philosophy of the New Deal. Quite the contrary. For after all the Supreme Court has only restated what Mr. Roosevelt himself said, apropos of his political philosophy, just eleven months ago:

> The artistic lines of the White House buildings were the creation of master builders when our Republic was young. The simplicity and the strength of the structure remain in the face of every modern test. But within this magnificent pattern the necessities of modern government business require constant reorganization and rebuilding • • • It is this combination of the old and the new that marks orderly, peaceful progress—not only in building buildings but in building government itself.

Two Different Issues.

Undue significance may easily be attached to passage of the District unemployment and old-age-pension bills in the House shortly after the Supreme Court had rendered three decisions adverse to the New Deal. It is true that opposition to these important local measures collapsed. But that does not necessarily indicate that the House was trying to present a united front in face of the court's adverse decisions. Nor does it mean that Congress will press forward with all New Deal legislation without regard for the dicta of the Supreme Court. On the contrary, Congressmen were probably so busy reading the opinions that they failed to attend the session at which these and nine other local bills were approved. Fewer than 50 members were on the floor.

No legal relationship exists between the NRA and the social security legislation now before Congress. The Schechter case turned upon the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution and upon the division of executive and legislative powers. Primary authority for enactment of the social security bill is found in the taxation clause, one of the broadest grants of power which the fundamental law confers upon Congress. Consequently, the opinions currently rendered by the court seem to have no application to the unemployment insurance and old-age-pension system contemplated in the Doughton bill.

More thought and more effort have gone into the drafting of the social security legislation than into any measure sponsored by the present Administration. The constitutionality of the bill has been exhaustively analyzed. Its provisions are drawn so as to throw chief responsibility for operation of social security systems upon the States. If its final enactment is accomplished with the same degree of intelligence that has entered into its drafting, there is good reason to believe that the benefits thus established will not be jeopardized by court action.

Nevertheless, the NRA decision carries a note of warning. This bill, as well as all others on the President's "must" program, may well be again scrutinized. The incentive to enact a bill of unquestioned practicability, in full conformity with the basic principles of our government, must now be doubly strong.

Champs In Private Life.

What becomes of champs? Or rather, what do champs become? Dempsey is now owner and proprietor of a night club; Helen Hicks is dispensing golf clubs and whatnot over a sport goods counter; Johnny Weismuller is swimming against a strong tide in the matrimonial sea; and Gene Tunney divides his time between his farm in Connecticut and the gypsy trail. But strangest of all, perhaps, is the career which Gertrude Ederle has picked for herself. Truly, daughter of Neptune and one-time darling of America, is now modeling "stylish stouts." In this way, she is capitalizing on the extra 40 pounds which she has put on since her record-breaking Channel swim nine years ago.

In 1926 a slim, 22-year-old girl swam the English Channel in 14 hours and 31 minutes. Landing in New York, she ran the usual Broadway gantlet of ticker tape, paper snow and vaudeville offers. Two years later she began to lose her hearing and, in 1930, declared wistfully that she didn't think her feat was "worth while." For the past year, Trudy Ederle has been abroad studying fashion designing, with a special eye on the needs of pleasantly plump women. Now she is back on a new job, which is to "think up three new styles a month for hefty figures." From 120 pounds, she now tips the scales at 160. How the mighty have fattened!

With the fate of one more champion settled for a few years at least, the burning question before the sports world today is the future of Abbie Villaret, who captured all records in New York this week. Will she accept vaudeville proposals, motion picture fortunes, or settle down to raising frogs? Funny occupation for a champ? Not at all, when the champ happens to be a lady frog.

The Army Finds Food Costs Soaring.

From The Philadelphia Inquirer.

An object lesson on the effects of the soaring prices of food is given in the complaints of United States Army officers. Some time ago 5 cents a day was added to the ration allowance of each private in the Army to cover expected increases in the cost of living. But despite careful buying in large quantities the cost has already risen 18 cents a day per man.

It is not likely that Congress will permit the armed forces of the Nation to starve. A way will be found to pay for the food required by the sailors and soldiers and the men of the Civilian Conservation Corps; but what of the army of taxpayers who are trying to make ends meet on limited incomes? Is Congress going to look out for their interests?

The Ubiquitous Blimp.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I, through your friendly and influential letter column, protest against the persistent presence in our sky area of the advertising dirigible?

It should interest the advertising company to know that, increasingly, persons who have had a favorable attitude toward their products, say that, now, having suffered as they have, under the persecuting sky-noise, they could not be persuaded to purchase them. This is familiar psychological reaction.

If there are sound reasons why the dirigible should be kept so continuously in the air, can it not be routed over park and water regions, rather than sent low over residential areas?

If, on the other hand, what chiefly keeps it overhead, is the effort to force President Roosevelt to change his attitude toward this type of craft, is not this a childish method by which to attempt such conversion? Must the ill, the well, suffer while it is pursued?

Dirt In Washington.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Huge sums of public money are being poured out for construction and destruction. And yet to get even minimum appropriations for adequate regular public services seems almost impossible. I refer especially to our local police forces, each of which is woefully undermanned, at the same time that all sorts of artificial and unnecessary jobs are being created in order to make work for men. This certainly seems both illogical and ironical.

An excellent educational work has been started by the superintendent of public schools to train school children not to scatter litter and trash. But adults can be trained only by guardians of the law whose word they will respect, but who are at present nonexistent for these purposes. This would require considerable enlargement of the present forces, but to what better service could men be put? Instead of expending millions in creating artificial jobs why not expend more freely for the preservation and maintenance of our few remaining beauty spots and for general cleanliness?

Returning to Washington after a visit to New York and Boston I am appalled anew by the comparative dirtiness and unkempt condition of our streets and sidewalks as well as parks. New York, with ten times the population density, manages to enforce the ordinances against strewing papers and trash in public places and to keep her streets and gutters, even in the congested areas, comparatively free of trash, while whole sections of Washington look like garbage dumps.

If our National Capital is ever to be a beautiful city and not merely a slovenly anomaly of magnificence sprawling in the midst of filth we would do well to appropriate less for construction and destruction and much more for upkeep and maintenance. THERESA RUSSELL.

Witness From Mexico.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was interested in the letter of Elizabeth Ridgeley in The Post, particularly since I have made periodic trips to Mexico during the past 25 years, traveling as far south as Yucatan. During that time I had ample opportunity to observe conditions in the Mexico of 1910 and the Mexico of today.

One who saw the condition of the people of Mexico up until recently is more than surprised—he is startled. Not only is young Mexico going to school by the thousands now, but the sanitary conditions in the rural sections, particularly, have improved very, very much. Mexico is certainly shaking off the thralldom of centuries and it seems to me that we of the United States should encourage her in her laudable endeavor.

As one Mexican put it to me, "Thousands of pesos that went to fatten Italians in Italy are now being spent on the education of Mexicans in Mexico!" Another said, "Religion is less costly to us in Mexico now—we have a few centavos left for ourselves—and you can tell the people of your country that for those who would worship God in Mexico, there are no hindrances by the government—the hindrances come from those over us in the churches."

In conclusion, I desire to say that our Ambassador to Mexico is respected by the Mexican people and he has certainly added to the prestige of the United States in Mexico by his sane, honest conduct.

Question And Answer.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your paper of May 21 contains a letter signed "F. W. Neve," in which he asks what he terms a fair question, although it is really a sly dig at the veterans for requesting the bonus payment.

Quoting Mr. Neve: "Why should not all creditors claim the same right?"

Answering Mr. Neve: There is no reason to my mind why all creditors can't claim the right, provided they have anything to claim, I feel sure the veterans would not be envious.

I might state for Mr. Neve's information that munitions and railroad companies, as well as many others made claims and were paid after the war by the Government.

I would like to obtain from Mr. Neve an answer to the following "fair" question: Why do people who do not share in a thing feel so spiteful and envious toward those who do? HARRY EDWARDS.

Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is again my very pleasant privilege to commend your most excellent Washington Post. This time I desire to commend the most excellent editorial of May 25 anent my dear friend and former rector, Dr. Robert Johnston. I knew Dr. Johnston and his wonderful character exceedingly well and I think there is no one who has better expressed what he stood for and his high ideals than your short editorial. I am certain that nothing which will be written of him will convey half as much of the great Christian soul which has gone from us, but which is still with us in the article in your esteemed paper.

I have been a reader of The Post for the past half century, as one of its originators, Mr. Uriah H. Painer, was a dear friend of ours, and except for the first days of its life, it has never reached the heights to which it has now attained.

Wheat Farmers Sold Gold Brick.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The outcome of the AAA wheat poll was a foregone conclusion. Officials of the AAA, acclaiming the favorable vote as a triumph for "economic democracy," actually are congratulating themselves on their progress toward "bureaucratic autocracy." Once again the American farmer has been sold a gold brick, although he does not know it yet. The 179,000 farmers who voted favorably constitute only 15 per cent of the 1,209,000 wheat growers of the country and about 20 per cent of the 800,000 contract signers!

What has really happened? Simply that lavish Government handouts of cash and clever propaganda by the AAA have blinded the wheat farmers to the following facts:

1. That the AAA wheat program has not been a success. Its maximum reduction in 1934 would have been 70,000,000 bushels but with the drought it was only 25,000,000. If its program had been carried out this year, its maximum reduction could have been not over 5 per cent or 40,000,000 bushels. None of these reductions would have increased the price of wheat materially. Drought was the vital factor in price increases. "Benefit payments" to farmers seem to be helpful, but they have been taken from other citizens through the processing tax, thus reducing their buying power by $200,000,000. And this has decreased the consumption of wheat products.

2. The adoption of an economically sound program based on reducing production costs, increasing yields, eliminating low-producing lands on wheat farms, improving wheat quality and allowing the economic factors of price and supply and demand to operate would result in an adequate reduction in the wheat acreage. But the paying of subsidies by the Government helps to keep the high-cost producers in business and offers no incentive for farmers to use better methods and cut their costs.

3. The real object of the AAA evidently is to perpetuate its bureaucracy in power at the farmer's expense. Some of the AAA bureaucrats apparently think of this in terms of holding their own jobs. Others aim at collectivism by regimenting the farmers.

With production control associations used to regiment and propagandize the farmers, with agricultural college professors muzzled by fear of losing their jobs, with subtly worked publicity flooding the country, with millions of dollars being used to bribe farmers to support the AAA programs and with the President himself trying to make the farmers believe that the Administration is protecting them against "the interests," it is not strange that the farmers should be deluded into voting for a four-year extension of the wheat program. Never before has the power of the United States Government been used to exploit our farmers.

The Post Impressionist

Roadbed Bedmaking

Post Office, Wednesday.

IS modernism investing the University of Virginia?

It would seem that some such siege is in progress. This modernistic communication comes to us from the near neighborhood of that venerable institution of learning—and is signed "T. Jefferson Quince."

• • •

"I, being an Impressionist, thought you might like the touching story soon hereinafter to follow. As you will observe, it is retold from, and largely in, a neighboring vernacular—and altogether in the intimate manner of Lafcadio Hearn, James Huneker, Horatio Alger, Nathaniel West and maybe somebody else. Anyhow, it is retold by me because all our professional retail-retellers seem to have gone away.

• • •

"Haven't you noticed that they have gone?

• • •

• • •

"Sherwood Anderson has gone seeking, again. Poor fellow, he has been seeking these many years now—off and on—he must be tired!

• • •

"Hemingway, according to your Column, has gone fishing—and it is perhaps best that the author of 'A Farewell to Arms' has gone fishing. Probably the fish will appreciate and understand the sudden decline of an American artist. ('Tuna fish,' says Ernest, 'if you would read James Farrell, you wouldn't have to read Hemingway.')

• • •

"Little lost sheep—those artists, not the fish—black sheep, some of them! I suppose they will return, eventually—revert to the original selves—given time and rope. But, meanwhile, they are away. So I will have to tell the story.

• • •

"Think of Walter Pater's description of the Mona Lisa, and the tinkling temple-bells, and the dancing feet of the dainty geisha girls (Dorothy and Lillian Gish), and Cabell's fragrant 'Domnei.' Think of Shubert and Bach and Ravel. Think of Stravinski played on steel beams by two riveters.

"Then look yourself in a room with walls bearing colorful abstractions by Dove, Kandinsky, Schwitters, or what have you?

"And now have at you!

"It was a November evening in the Blue Ridge. The Rover Boys were having a dance in Brother Mel's one-room mansion. The place was crowded. Between dances, when the folks got shet of their misery and clompin', and the caller got tahd of a-calling them numbers (a number-game was in progress), the folks would file out on the porch and the mountain; they would file out because there were 'bars in them thar hills.'

"Eastward, the sharp ridges of the Ragged Mountains cut the sky; northeastward, a dull glow marked the forbidden campus and evildoers of the University of Virginia. The boys on the East and West Ranges, and even on Dawson's Row, were also keeping late hours and burping the midnight oil. The only difference was that the lamp in Brother Mel's mansion did not have a globe, and smoked and sputtered. The boys on Dawson's Row also smoked and sputtered, but the other folks drank out of a two-gallon jug, had red flannels on their chests, took their liquor straight, and the boys on Dawson's Row drank out of a half-gallon Mason jar and put charred chips in theirs.

• • •

"Anyway, on with the dance!

"I just wanted to say that Brother Mel drank too much of them-thar spirits in that-thar jug, and went and laid down in the mud of the highway.

"Come dawn, me and some other hill-billies tried to arouse him from a'sleepin' in the dad-gummed mud. We roused and roused, but he didn't have no mind to arise. So we tugged a mite at his anatomy, and he wouldn't agree that he should ought to be up and a-cutting his old woman a mess of firewood. So we tugged a mite more at his fetched hide—and come to find his ear was a-froze to the ground.

"We had to chip him out and send him along home with a hunk of mud in his ear, a-hopping' up the path like a dad-blame yearling bothered by flies.

• • •

"I don't know yet how Brother Mel made out, but I reckon he come to no good end, because his wife was a tidy woman what was always a-botherin' Mel about a-tracking' mud around like a shiftless houn dawg. I reckon meeble we might write them folks on Lawson's Row tew find out if them psychologists and noorologists at the University have found out from their dad-gum guinea-pigs about what happens when Ragged Mountain reflexes ain't what they had ought to be . . .

• • •

"Come to think, though, I remember a-draggin' a couple of students out of somebody's fishpond one fine summer evening, so I reckon they has got their own problems to solve on them East and West Ranges.

"I'll just write to the editor of the Virginia Quarterly Review to start a symposium on the evils of sleepin' in winter mud."

The Bird's Philosophy.

GEN. JOHNSON, who must feel secretly tickled over the outcome of the NRA because there will be a lot of people to observe the Supreme Court didn't bother the bird while he had it—he has raised the question of whether the old hen's true philosophy was presented to the court in the Shechter poultry case. Don Richberg hasn't said anything about philosophy but he did say it was a perfect case.

The fact is that it perfectly reflected the philosophy behind the NRA. It is doubtful if a better case could have been selected.

Under the old order of jungle competition and chaos a person buying chickens from the Shechter Brothers could look them over and say: "I'll take those four chickens from this coop, those five from that coop and those six from the coop over yonder." Under the NRA the United States Government, backed by countless G-men, by the military and naval forces, and all three branches are being rapidly increased, came figuratively to stand by these coops and tell the purchaser: "Oh, no you don't. You either take all the chickens from this one coop and or you take no chickens at all."

* * * *

It's amazing the Shechter brothers had the courage to stand out against this force, which is not afraid of the armed forces of any other country, and let the customer select the chickens from any coop he wanted to. In spite of all the camouflage and high-sounding phrases in which the NRA was wrapped this was its real philosophy. The Supreme Court took a look at it, at first was inclined to laugh, and then said, "Oh, nerts!" Furthermore, it said it so loudly, 9 to 0, that if the Administration should try to carry out its earlier threat of stacking the court to insure its friendliness it would have to appoint ten more judges, which, perhaps, it could get from the relief rolls.

The result is, of course, that the G-men, the military and naval forces are withdrawn from the Shechter chicken coop and chaos and jungle competition will again reign, because you can imagine what a hullabaloo will ensue when the customer insists on running his hand through each coop and closely studying each chicken. Chickens were right noisy even under the NRA and with a customer running his hand around among them you can imagine the noise they will set up.

* * * *

It will be funny now to watch just where the Administration in its floundering around lands. And it is more than passably strange that in none of the talk about what will be done has there been suggestion of going back to the Democratic platform of enforcing and improving the anti-trust laws. That hasn't been mentioned and it won't be, notwithstanding that at the time the Democrats were elected it was their contention that the severity of the depression had been caused by ignoring the anti-trust laws and permitting the great concentrations of power and wealth that had come about.

And at this late date there will be hardly anyone to seriously want them to create the disturbance that a right-about face and enforcement of the anti-trust laws would necessarily cause.

* * * *

They have thrown away the two years in which they had to enact their promised reforms. After all, we've got to settle down now and get the unemployed back to work. It's too bad. Millions of thoughtful Democrats are dissappointed. If the two years of reforming had been devoted to effecting this promised reform we would have had it behind us by now and been moving along under a real New Deal.

Under the circumstances, there is not the slightest doubt where the Administration will land when it finally emerges from the darkness and confusion which the Supreme Court decision put it in. It will set up a modified NRA, that is, an NRA which will permit those businesses and industries which want to get together voluntarily to violate the anti-trust laws, to do so.

Then we will be right back where we were under Mr. Coolidge. There will be this difference. Mr. Coolidge had Bill Donovan over in the Department of Justice to show businesses and industries how to get around the anti-trust laws. The New Deal will have to have a structure of about 5,000 persons to perform this job. It will have to have a structure of this size so it won't appear to be the same thing Mr. Coolidge did.

G. O. P. Row In Kansas

Wheat Farmers, Torn Between Inborn Republicans And AAA Payments Of New Deal, Stir Up Political Rumpus That Will Be Reflected In Coming Springfield Convention.

By Hilding Sivertsen.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

JUST as it seemed that Kansas Republican leaders were about to play an important part in the coming Springfield convention, called for June 10, there was a spilling of beans which may sadly gum up the detail.

It started when Simon Fishman, a Jewish wheat farmer of Tribune, in the western part of Kansas, was given a job at $350 a month by the AAA, and reiterated his fealty to the New Deal. Mr. Fishman is a Republican, and that is what caused the trouble.

It must be said in fairness to Mr. Fishman that his adherence to the New Deal began before he got the job. Discussions of which came first—the hen or the egg—are fruitless. Mr. Fishman was a Republican New Dealer, and that was all there was to it.

John D. M. Hamilton, the Kansas Republican national committeeman, didn't like the idea, and he boldly said that Mr. Fishman couldn't come to the Springfield party. In fact, he no longer considered Mr. Fishman a Republican.

* * * *

THEN other Republicans began to call for chips in the game. Former Congressman J. N. (Poly) Tincher, a standpatter of standpatters, took Fishman's side. Clifford Hope, Republican member of Congress from southwestern Kansas, has long been on record as a fervent champion of the AAA. Senator Arthur Capper also supports the AAA to the extent of its wheat program. In fact, it would be difficult to find a prominent Kansas Republican politician who would come out and denounce the wheat program of the AAA.

On top of it all, it seems certain, at this writing, that the AAA wheat program will be overwhelmingly indorsed by the Kansas wheat farmers. It was the certainty of that, in fact, which caused all the internecine strife within the Kansas Republican Party. And everybody knows that the Republican Party anywhere is in a bad enough fix as it is without resorting to internecine strife. Mr. Hamilton ought to have known what was coming, but it is presumed that he was feeling his oats because Kansas has strangely remained Republican throughout the New Deal Administration, and he may have thought that he had something to do with the phenomenon.

* * * *

THERE seems to be a double meaning back of the AAA psychology. Students of Middle-West politics, whether pro-Roosevelt or anti-Roosevelt, are compelled to recognize the double meaning in order to keep their thinking straight.

It was voiced the other day by a thoughtful and impartial student of agriculture—a man who takes no part whatsoever in politics. He said:

"If I were a wheat farmer I would certainly vote in favor of the AAA wheat program, for the simple reason that my wheat crop would be short, with a poor prospect this year, and I would be foolish not to take advantage of relief when relief is being passed around. At the same time I know full well that this kind of business can't go on forever. It is purely an emergency measure. I distinctly don't believe in the AAA program as a permanent governmental policy. If it is followed much longer it will surely lead to all kinds of complexities and grief."

It is true that Dan Casement, a prominent Republican farmer of Kansas, has come out openly and denounced the AAA and all it's works, but he is in the minority as far as immediate voting is concerned.

This being true, most of the Kansas Republican leaders today are tip-toeing around as if walking on eggs, trying to pick up the spilled beans so as to present a united front at Springfield. They will probably try to keep the AAA clear out of the discussions at that convention.

* * * *

THE Kansas delegation in both houses at Washington is highly susceptible to bloc pressure. It was one of the few States in which the entire delegation—Democratic and Republican, Representatives and Senators—voted for the Patman soldier's bonus bill after the Presidential veto. By the same token it will stand up for the AAA wheat program, regardless of what its private opinions may be. The Republican Washington contingent, of course, will insist upon being considered respectfully at the Springfield party.

Hence the blood on the moon, the flies in the soup, the nux vomica in the ice cream. Some one has blundered, and apparently it isn't Mr. Fishman. As far as political expediency is concerned, he seems to be as right as two jack-rabbits.

What effect his policy and that of the Messrs. Capper, Hope and others will ultimately have upon the future of the Republican Party in Kansas and the Nation is another thing. But such things don't seem to cause the present-day politician much loss of sleep. Anyhow, Kansas Republicanism isn't half so cocky as it was a few weeks ago.

Montmartre Plans Fete Celebration for Paris

Paris (U.P.).—Historic Montmartre is to contribute to the Paris season by a fete of its own.

What form it will take is not yet known, but in all probability the chief feature will be a series of pageants: Gabriel d'Estrees greeting Henry IV on his entry into Paris, and Moliere and his troupe on their way to give a play in the open air near the tomb of St. Denis, which was almost on the site of the celebrated Moulin de la Galette.

Souvenirs of Montmartre in the days of Henri Murger, Gavarni and Alfred de Musset are to be assembled in an inclosure adjoining the Church of the Sacred Heart.

Overlooked Formality Of Swearing in Cops

Hornell, N. Y. (U.P.).—Although Hornell has been a city for 29 years and has had a staff of policemen which now numbers 17, it never had a legally qualified policeman until this year.

When Howard M. Travis appeared at the city clerk's office to be sworn in, he was told "You're the first man to do this." He investigated and found that although the law requires policemen to take an oath, none had done so since Hornell was incorporated as a city. He immediately remedied the situation.

Providence, R. I. (U.P.).—An epicures club—The Restaurant Club, Hotel Dieticians' Association—has been formed here to educate the collective palate of Rhode Islanders in the proper appreciation of fine foods and the gourmet's art.

Sun In Monterey.

SO YOU SEE, in the state of golly-blue doldrums of which I wrote yesterday, I picked up John Steinback's litl novel, "Tortilla Flat" (Covici-Friede, $2.50). Now I didn't feel any more like reading a book than I did of doing a Blondin across Niagara Falls on a high wire. But bless the publishers and Ruth Gannett, the illustrator—they put a very cheery jacket on the volume—which pictured a captivating street-scene of these "paisanos" (native Californians of every mixed Mexican and Indian ancestry and dubious respectability), and before I really knew it I had a howdy-do with Danny and his friends, and was off like a pot of fudge boiling over.

Some years ago Robert Haven Schauffler put together an anthology of poetry, of great pictures, of pages of famous music, and called it "The Poetry Cure." There were sections to cure bile, melancholia, low blood pressure and so on, and roundly efficacious they were. With the same eye on the fact that most people, these days and in this world, aren't going about in the state of blissful euphoria beloved in magazine fiction, let me recommend "Tortilla Flat" as a pick-me-up of the first order.

It is one of the sunniest, most genial, most entertaining and original books I've had the luck to come upon. And just, as the saying goes, what the doctor ordered.

* * * *

TORTILLA FLAT, to come down to topography, is the dusty street, lined with ramshackle, but rose-covered huts, which lies up the hill above Monterey, Calif. A back-water of delicious indolence in an up-and-doing world, it housed these light-living, light-loving, wine-toping "paisanos." Fiction hasn't seen anyone quite so care-free since the last Caldwell novel—but the difference is that where Mr. Caldwell looked carefully under the stone to see the bugs crawling there, Mr. Steinbeck observes only the top of the stone, warm, inviting and natural in the sun.

First, there was Danny, home from the war, who filled himself up on red wine and went around town breaking windows in his complicated joy at being back. Down he went to the wharves to sass the Sicilian fishermen and they only called back: "Hello, Danny. When'd you get back? Come around tonight. We got new wine!" And then he remembered that his grandfather had died and left him two houses up in the Flat. It was sobering; he, who had slept in the pinewoods or under rowboats, was now a property owner.

Then his friend Pilon moved into the little house, promising to pay $15 a month rent—every dollar Pilon had seen meant a gallon of red wine, and that only. And then along came Pablo, and Pilon would let him take up quarters in the little house for $15 a month, thus easing what after all was a conscience. And that was fine until one night, after a party, the house burned down. But they only moved in on the great-hearted Danny.

This began the Knights of the Round Table of Tortilla Flat. If there were one thing Danny and his friends liked better than the wine from Torrelli's or a mess of mackerel (gained by heaving rocks and insults at the fishermen, whereupon the fish thrown back in angry reply meant food for the day), it was to do good—plain, literal, albeit somewhat sentimental and misguided good around town. Old Jesus Maria Corcoran felt their bounty first, he who slept in a henhouse with his five dogs, rose at daybreak to beg at restaurant back doors and cut a wheelbarrow load of pine kindling a day, which he sold for a quarter. He never spent the quarters. Dogs and all, he came to live with the brotherhood—and never before had they been so well-fed as on the gleanings which old Jesus Maria brought them. As for his hoards of two-bitses, it was fair game for their wits as long as he kept it hid; when he brought it out and put it, most touchingly, into their guardian hands, when it became as sacred as the Grail. What the brethren did to Big Joe Portagee when he molested it, was a caution.

* * * *

YOU can take your pick of the adventure of the little Mexican soldier and his baby, or the lady with the eight children who could eat nothing but beans, or the search for buried treasure on St. Andrew's Eve when, as everyone knows, treasure trove glows with a phosphorescent light, or the grand climatic party which both brought Danny's spirits back and made him a figure of legend.

There's nothing what you will enjoy most in this altogether delightful book. But if Mr. Steinbeck has not done a piece of enchanting story-telling in your eyes, and if Danny and his friends in Tortilla Flat don't take you out into the literal and figurative sun, then there's no balm for you in Gilead. For me, yes—I never had a better time with a book.

Irish Setters And A Book

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps.

HERE is a delightful book about the achievements of bird-dogs. It might possibly be classed among novels written mainly for boys and girls, because its style is purposely adapted to youthful readers But I think any one who loves bird-dogs, and especially the Irish setter, will enjoy reading this volume as much as I have.

The name of the book is "King of Mapledale: A Loyal Dog," and the author is Loyd Thompson (published by Appleton & Co. in 1927).

Dr. Loyd Thompson was born in Pennsylvania, took his bachelor's degree at Westminster College, studied at Yale and at the University of Southern California, and took his M. D. at the University of Arkansas. He has had plenty of experience as a bacteriologist, pathologist and practicing physician; and has written important publications in these fields of medical science.

* * * *

But he loves dogs, and especially Irish setters. It is interesting to see this man of science writing a novel so full of gusto and delight in the companionship of dogs; and no one who has ever done any shooting or had any general acquaintance with setters can fail to get a thrill out of these pages.

Although I have been out with guns and dogs every season for many years, it so happens that I have never seen a field trial; but the vivid descriptions of the competitive field trials in these chapters, with the triumphs of the Irish setter will stir the blood of any man.

The only dogs I have ever owned are Irish setters, so that I fully share the enthusiasm of Dr. Thompson for these beautiful and intelligent and affectionate creatures.

Madison, Wis.—A spiritual revival should accompany present economic recovery programs, according to E. G. Doudna, secretary of the State Normal School regents.

"Why has not a Whitefield, a Wesley, or even a Billy Sunday appeared?" he asked in a recent speech, citing that the present depression is the only one in history where there has not been a spiritual revival.

"We have leaders in economics, in education, in politics, and in every other field, but what we need is some leaders who will start from within rather than from without," he added.

Adults Given College Course By Federal Aid

Benefit of U. S. Land Grant Schools Cited Before Extension Group.

By the United Press.

Lincoln, Nebr.—Federal land grant colleges and universities have a special province in educating the adult through extension courses and no group of institutions of higher education excels them in experience in this class of service, F. D. Farrell, president of Kansas State College, told the National University Extension Association at a meeting here.

This service, President Farrell said, includes educational help to adults not only on the college campuses but also in the home, on the farm, in the factory, the print shop, the mercantile establishment and the bank.

Off Campus Students.

"Even in what we are pleased to recall as normal times it was not at all uncommon for a single land grant college to provide some off campus educational service to a quarter of a million adults in a single year," he said. "The members are even greater in these abnormal times when people feel an increased need for educational service."

Smaller numbers of adults are served on the campuses, Dr. Farrell said, and cited Kansas State as typical.

"We average about 60 groups of adults a year, which in turn average a few more than 150 persons, so that the total number of persons served annually in this way is about 10,000. These groups are short course students who remain on the campus for periods ranging from one day to several weeks."

Interests of the groups are extremely varied, President Farrell said, and include seed growing, operation of chick hatcheries, land appraisal training, child training, home beautification, construction and maintenance of highways, bee keeping, taxation and scores of other matters.

Land grant colleges, however, are not all-sufficient in the field of adult education, Dr. Farrell said, and in order to render service they must cooperate with other educational agencies.

"One of the most serious errors any educational institution can commit is to attempt to do everything that needs doing in the educational world," he said. "It is better for all concerned that each educational institution restrict the scope of its activities in the interests of quality and performance. To do this requires constant and sincere cooperation."

The situation in Kansas was cited by Farrell to show what can be accomplished by cooperation. Five Kansas schools conduct extension departments and for years the five men in charge of their respective departments have worked together to eliminate needless duplication. The result is that with 309 courses offered 81 per cent of the courses are not duplicated at all and less than 2 per cent are duplicated by all five schools.

Mayor Puts Ad in Paper To Curtail Gambling

West Mansfield, Ohio (U.P.).—When J. E. Bectel, Mayor of West Mansfield, started an antigambling movement here, he carried his orders to the public in a two-column advertisement in a weekly newspaper.

The advertised "orders" preceded by the word "Attention" in large letters, appeared in the paper as follows:

"Notice is hereby given that all card games must cease at 11 o'clock each Saturday night, and no card games will be allowed in any business place in West Mansfield on Sunday. This order must be obeyed in order to avoid further trouble."

Chance Blow of Pick Revealed Secret Room

San Juan Capistrano, Calif. (U.P.). Discovered through a chance blow of a workman's pick, the ruins of a room of the old San Juan Capistrano Mission that evidently has been hidden since the days of the padres, is being uncovered.

A masonry drain leading from the patio of the room was uncovered by Rudolph Yorba, a mission laborer. Father A. J. Hutchison, pastor, ordered further trenches dug, and the foundations of the old walls were found.

Ramon Yorba, 77, employed by the mission for 69 years, can not recall hearing of the room.

College Library Gets Poe, Irving Letters

Easton, Pa. (U.P.).—Judge W. S. McLean, of Wilkes-Barre, has presented a packet of letters written by Edgar Allan Poe and Washington Irving, to the Lafayette College library.

The letters were found by Judge McLean's father in a pile of rubbish while he was an undergraduate at Lafayette. The elder McLean was a member of the class of 1865.

Ruling Awaited On Missouri's Liquor Laws

No Attempt Will be Made At Enforcement Pending Action.

By the United Press.

Jefferson City, Mo.—Liquor retailers, distributors and manufacturers, as well as a few of the citizenry, are awaiting with interest Attorney General Roy McKittrick's interpretation of the new liquor laws that recently became effective.

The two new bills, one revising the State liquor control act, the other correcting the 3.2 beer law, were submitted to the attorney general by State Liquor Supervisor E. P. Becker. No attempt will be made to enforce them until McKittrick's interpretation is filed.

It is expected within a week. Soon afterward, Supervisor Becker will call in all his inspectors, give them their new instructions and then enforcement of the new regulations will begin.

Prohibits Liquor Displays.

Least noticed provision of the two measures thus far is a section of the liquor revision bill prohibiting display of liquor in store windows. It was written in on suggestion of Senator Joseph L. Kennedy and the House agreed to it.

An inspection of liquor stores in Kansas City, Jefferson City and St. Louis shows that when enforcement of the provision is begun many windows will have to be redecorated. That should make a number of windows trimmers happy.

The liquor department is especially interested in the interpretation of the modified search and seizure section and provision for closing of places that are nuisances by injunction.

Closing Issue.

Becker doubts that the search and seizure provision will stand up in court tests. The injunction closing is largely contingent on the success the search and seizure power enjoys.

Enforcement of the extended closing hour also will be interesting to watch. The former midnight closing hour was ignored entirely and it is believed that Becker will encounter considerable trouble in enforcing the 1:30 a. m. curfew.

The law provides that places close at midnight Saturday night to observe Sunday closing. This will be especially difficult to enforce. Proprietors of saloons, taverns, night clubs and other miscellaneous types of drinking emporiums report that the Saturday night crowds want to stay an hour or two later than do patrons on any other night during the week.

Wisconsin Deer Alter Winter Food Habits

Rhinelander, Wis. (U.P.).—Winter feeding habits of deer have changed, forest rangers of the Mondeaux district of Chequamagon National Forest have reported.

An intensive study shows that deer prefer the following plants in the order named: blueberry, red maple, witch hazel, white cedar, red osier, dogwood, balsam fir, wild gooseberry, black ash, mountain maple, pussy willows and sugar maple.

The white cedar previously had been considered the favorite winter deer browse with maple the most acceptable hardwood diet. The study indicates the animals have eaten themselves out of their favorite foods and are getting on well with substitutes.

Gladiolus Exhibition Planned at South Bend

South Bend, Ind. (U.P.).—The National Gladiolus Exhibition, the world's largest horticultural show, will be held here August 16-18 in connection with the annual convention of the American Gladiolus Society.

More than 77,000 persons visited the exhibit at the World's Fair at Chicago last year.

The event, sponsored by the horticultural committee of the chamber of commerce, is expected to attract entries from the United States, Canada and several foreign countries.

Few Berries Grown At Strawberry, Ark.

By the United Press.

Strawberry, Ark.—This small Lawrence County town has three names and all of them are used.

The postoffice name is Strawberry, it is called Catheytown in honor of a pioneer merchant, J. A. Cathey, but its real name as listed in county records is Lone Hill.

Indians named the community Strawberry, old-timers say, because of an abundance of wild strawberries in this section. Very few strawberry vines, either wild or domestic, grow here now.

Although the town has been incorporated for 50 years no city government has ever been organized. Township officers administer justice.

Marland Rules School Lands With Iron Fist

Oklahoma Governor Now Wields One-Man Control Over Board.

By the United Press.

Oklahoma City.—Oklahoma has the nearest to a one-man school land commission it ever had—or will have until the proposed constitutional amendment, reorganizing the commission, is voted.

The reason is simple—Gov. E. W. Marland has practically assumed a der feuhrer control over the department. At the first meeting, he adopted a gruff tone reminiscent of the historic battles of W. H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray with the commissioners.

Though he was blocked in naming Bob Wilson, former State superintendent, as secretary, he named Jess Larson and got by with it. Larson, as secretary, wields great power and is preponderantly for Marland.

Since then, other employes have been moved out and Marland men put in several strategic places. When the other commissioners—Secretary of State Frank Carter, State Superintendent John Vaughan, Board of Agriculture President Harry Cordell and Auditor C. C. Childers—moved out Haskell Paul as attorney (Cordell dissenting) Marland named his own man, Orlando Sweet, Guymon, to handle the legal affairs.

"Any objection? So ordered!" Marland says.

The other commissioners are silent 99 per cent of the time. When they balked at the proposed planning board appraisal of school lands, Larson went ahead and asked the planning board to make the survey. Gov. Marland had recommended it.

So far, Marland has ruled high and mighty. Observers are wondering how long it will be before the rebellion starts, and a repetition of the W. H. Murray uproar begins.

Quoddy Power Long a Dream Of Roosevelt's

$10,000,000 Is Available for Project; 3 Dams to Be Constructed.

By the United Press.

Eastport, Me.—A dream of 25 years ago is about to come true for President Roosevelt.

As a vacationist at Campobello Island in his youth, he was one of the first to see the vast potential power hidden in the mighty tides that surge in and out of the Bay of Fundy.

Now, as Chief Executive, he is behind the $36,000,000 Passamaquoddy Bay tidal development project, to start which a $10,000,000 Federal work-relief appropriation has been made available.

Believed Unique.

Electric power generated from the harnessed tides is expected to prove a boon not only to industry but to the two-thirds of Maine farms still without electricity.

Already this Eastern outpost, whose sardine-packing industry has been badly nipped by hard times, is bustling with activity preliminary to the project, believed unique in engineering history.

Interest of the President, who for years has virtually made the tidal scheme a hobby, has been shared by Dexter P. Cooper, Minnesota-born engineer and brother of Col. Hugh Cooper, chief of construction in the Muscle Shoals development. Dexter Cooper, also a summer resident of Campobello Island, has urged the project for ten years.

To Take 3½ Years.

About 600 men will be employed in June; 2,500 in July, and ultimately as many as 8,000.

The work will be completed in 3½ years.

The combined population of Eastport and nearby Lubec, now about 7,000, is expected to increase to 30,000. Operations are to be started immediately to provide housing for the workers.

Cooper's original plan covered both Canadian and American waters, but the dominion government withdrew. Thus, Cobscook Bay, with its average tide drop of 18 feet, becomes the center of the project. A 4-mile dam will divide the bay into an upper and lower pool. Another dam, with hinged gates, will separate the lower pool from the outer bay, shutting out the tides and keeping the lower pool at a low-tide level.

3 Billion Kilowatt-Hours.

A third dam will divide the upper pool from the outer bay. Its gates will be opened at the crest of each incoming tide to fill the pool, and then closed to keep it at high-tide level.

The head of power will be furnished by the difference in levels between the two pools, averaging 18 feet. The water will fall continuously from the upper to the lower pool through turbine generators in the middle dam. Water emptied from the upper pool will be replaced at the crest of each tide when the gates will be opened for 2 hours and 15 minutes. Outgoing gates will be opened for three hours at low tide to free the lower pool of water from the upper level.

Under the original plan, before it was abbreviated due to withdrawal of Canadian support, Cooper estimated it would produce more than 3,000,000,000 kilowatt-hours of current yearly.

Paris Prepares To Light Up—By Floodlights

Illumination Which Has Made City Famous Is Being Increased.

By the United Press.

Paris.—The illumination of buildings and monuments of Paris, which has done so much to make the city a brilliant spectacle at night, will be increased this year. Tourists visiting the capital of France will find a city shining with light at night.

Among the famous landmarks that already have been thrown into sharp relief by floodlights are the Arc de Triomphe, the Obelisk, Notre Dame, the Madeleine and the Opera. The entire Avenue de l'Opera and the Place de la Concorde also have been bathed in a glare of electricity.

To these will be added the Pantheon, where the bones of France's illustrious dead are buried; the Conciergerie, those two conical towers of the Palace of Justice, which nearly were destroyed by fire recently, and which will shine in reflection in the Seine; the Institute of France, where the Forty Immortals sit; the Perrault colonade of the Louvre, the Arc du Carrousel, the graceful, nobly proportioned building of the chancellery of the Legion of Honor, the Invalides, the City Hall, the Port Saint Martin, the Comedie Francaise, the Opera Comique, and above all of them, apparently floating unsupported, the saccharine Oriental domes of Sacre Couer.

Floodlighting also will be applied to the entire Rue Royale, making a continuous blaze of light from the Seine through the Place de la Concorde to the Madeleine.

Find Police Gun Lost 8 Years.

Cleveland (U.P.).—A service revolver lost eight years ago while Police Patrolman Jess Bransky was on duty has been found. Detectives discovered the weapon in a home where they were searching drawers for correspondence.

Hartford, Conn. (U.P.).—One by one, during the 300 years that Connecticut has outgrown its original settlement founded by a small band of pioneers from the Massachusetts Bay colony, the "blue laws" which ruled with an iron hand have been erased from the statute books.

The tercentennary celebration of the State sent many poring over the pages of history. They found in early days that the death penalty could be inflicted for:

Blaspheming God.

A youth of 16 years or more to strike or curse his parents.

To be a stubborn or rebellious son.

Return to the colony after being banished as a Quaker or a Roman Catholic priest.

Witchcraft, treason, adultery or rape.

And, it was also found that they were called "blue laws" because they first were written upon blue paper.

The Sabbath was strictly observed. One was not permitted to saunter about in his garden, kiss his wife or a mother kiss her child; all household duties were abandoned, except eating, and all food had to be cooked at least the day before. The Sabbath began at sundown Saturday night.

The General Court dealt severely with scandal mongers. Early offenses were punishable by fines. Repeaters went to the stocks and chronic offenders faced a magistrates' court after a public whipping. The magistrates' court invoked the death penalty.

Before the laws were reduced to writing, the town crier announced them in a public place at regular intervals.

In case it was found a law had not been made for some specific offense, the violator was judged under this concluding clause in the fundamental law of the colony:

"For want of a law in any particular case he shall be judged by the word of God."

There is no record of such judgments.

Garner Was Freshman At Vanderbilt University

Nashville, Tenn. (U.P.).—President Roosevelt's two congressional lieutenants—Vice President John N. Garner and Speaker of the House Joseph W. Byrns—were classmates at Vanderbilt University.

Byrns was in the law school while Garner studied one year in the academic department.

Garner apparently made little impression upon his campus associates. A half dozen who live in Nashville do not remember attending classes with the Texan.

A small card in the registrar's office is the only remaining record of Garner's stay at Vanderbilt. He matriculated in the freshman class at 19 in 1889. He was a boarding student from Detroit, Tex., and did not return for the sophomore year.

Baton Rouge Confused By Martial Law Edict

Baton Rouge, La. (U.P.).—Citizens of Baton Rouge encounter peculiar difficulties living under martial and civil law at once.

A crowd gathered in the courthouse corridor to bid on property being offered at forced sale by Deputy Sheriff John Amiss in obedience to a court order. Up stepped Sergt. Wagner, Louisiana National Guardsman. "Martial law prohibits gathering in the courthouse," he told Deputy Amiss.

Caught between guardsmen and a judge's order, Amiss was bewildered. He finally prevailed on the guardsman to explain things to military headquarters. The sale finally proceeded.

Baton Rouge has been under National Guard since January 25, when the National Guard was called out to quell a citizens' uprising against Huey P. Long's regime.

Sequoia fire lookout as Ash Peak. Witnesses said it apparently was in trouble, as it left the squadron 15 minutes before the accident.

It turned on its back, went into a flat spin, and then nose-dived into the trees.

Defect Doubted.

Lieut. Col. C. L. Tinker, commanding the maneuvers, said he was certain there was no defect in the mechanism, as it was capable of flying even with one of its two motors disabled.

Maj. H. D. Smith, commanding officer of the squadron, said it appeared Lieut. Root was unable to right his plane after it began circling in a steep bank.

One of the accompanying planes landed at Visalia and two others alighted at Fresno, the personnel returning to the park to investigate the accident.

Fresno headquarters of the CCC dispatched orders to the camp in the park for an ambulance, doctor and 20 men to proceed at once to the scene.

Radicals Row as Duke Rides Glasgow Streets

Glasgow, Scotland, May 28 (U.P.).—Frightened horses and men waving red flags, shouting "Down with royalty!" disturbed a drive of the Duke and Duchess of Kent here today, as part of a good-will jubilee visit to Scotland on behalf of King George.

The radical demonstration occurred as the young duke, son of the monarch, and his recent bride, motored through otherwise cheering throngs in an open car. Five men were arrested, charged with disturbance of the peace.

Earlier, when the duke and duchess were driving to a hospital in an open carriage, one of the horses shied at the fluttering decorations and they hurriedly changed to a police car.

Nira, Iowa, Wishes Its Namesake Well

By the Associated Press.

Nira, Iowa, May 28.—Nira is "going right ahead" regardless of what happens to its "namesake," the national industrial recovery act.

Postmaster E. J. Yoder, spokesman for the 20 inhabitants of this little crossroads village, has read of the blow the Supreme Court deal the NRA. But Washington officialdom, he believes, will "work out something to take the place of the NRA."

Issuance of special NRA postage stamps in August, 1932, created the greatest excitement here since the front of the general store collapsed a few years before. It also brought the one-man postoffice a landoffice business.

Norsemen Here In 14th Century Stone Reveals

By the United Press.

Detroit Lakes, Minn.—Belief that a tribe of ancient Norsemen visited this territory in the fourteenth century was voiced by F. T. Gustavson, Pequot, Minn., nationally known anthropologist, after a study of several stones at Cormorant Lake near here known as the "Norse Anchor Stones."

After viewing the stones, Gustavson declared that the runic inscription on the famous Kensington Runestone fits entirely with the Cormorant Lake stones.

The inscription on the Kensington stone reads:

"Eight Goths and 22 Norwegians on exploration—journey from Vineland westward. We had camp by two skerries one day—journey north from this stone. We fished one day. When we returned home we found ten men red with blood and dead. Ave Maria, Save from evil! Have ten of our party by the sea to look after our ships in 14-day journey from this island. Year 1362."

Gustavson explained that a day's journey meant at that time the distance traveled by boat along the coast of Norway, about 80 miles.

"The lake with the 'two skerries' is Cormorant Lake," he added, "while the sea where the ships were left is probably Hudson Bay. The party must have come down the Nelson River, Lake Winnipeg and the Red River to the mouth of the Buffalo River and by this stream to Cormorant Lake—where vestiges of the Norsemen still remain."

100 Idle Men Storm Illinois Relief Station

2 Officers Beaten Before Sheriff's Men Break Up Demonstration.

By the Associated Press.

Charleston, Ill., May 28.—Beating and disarming two constables, 100 jobless men stormed the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission agency here today in a mass protest against their asserted failure to recieve food orders.

Sheriff Roy Clark and ten policemen and deputies rushed to the office, arrested five alleged leaders of the demonstration and disbanded their followers.

"They're letting us starve," a spokesman for the unemployed declared. The crowd marched to the agency to present applications for aid—and written complaints that some of the destitute had no food.

Miss Frances Schmidt, Illinois relief administrator, rejected the complaints. Constables Fred Kamp and Edward Warpenberg blocked the door. They were struck down and tossed into the brush, but neither suffered painful injury. Their pistols were hurled away.

Five of the jobless group had entered the office when the sheriff's force arrived. There was no further violence, and the jobless men returned to their homes when a heavy rain swept the streets.

Frank Pearcy, Otto Robinson, Charles Kirkendols, George Metzler and Roy Gilpin were taken to jail. Authorities said they were married men who had been receiving relief. Most of the others, they added, had applied for aid, but had not received it.

The relief agency, serving Coles County, had supplied emergency food orders to clients on its regular rolls during the recent relief breakdown in the State, but had been unable to care for new applicants. Almost 1,000 had been added to the unemployed ranks by factory layoffs.

Poll Officials Called to Court In Recount Plea

126 Election Judges Are Quizzed in Montgomery on Ballot Sealing.

John B. Diamond and Raleigh S. Chinn, defeated Democratic candidates for commissioner in Montgomery County last fall, yesterday brought 126 judges of election into court as witnesses in their contention a recount of votes should be granted.

The testimony was sought to refute evidence introduced at a hearing Tuesday in behalf of the two successful Fusion Party candidates, Charles E. King and Frank H. Karn.

At that time attorneys representing King and Karn sought to prove a recount would not be practicable or fair by introducing evidence that certain packages of rejected and spoiled ballots, necessary in a recount, had not been in the custody of the clerk of the circuit court here for the entire period since the election.

Quizzed on Sealing.

Capt. Joseph C. Cissell, attorney for the plaintiffs, questioned the election judges in a move to bring out that all ballots, valid, rejected and spoiled, had been locked and sealed in ballot boxes by the judges after the election, as required by law.

Police Court Judge Harold C. Smith was on the bench, acting in the capacity of justice of the peace. When the taking of testimony is complete, the evidence will go to the judges of the circuit court, who will decide on whether or not to grant an appeal.

On cross-examination, attorneys for the defendants, F. Barnard Welsh, Vivian Simpson and Edward Peter, gained admissions from several of the election judges that in a few cases they were not sure the ballots had been sealed up.

Little Interest Shown.

Although the proceedings are important to the county—if a recount is granted and Diamond picks up 97 additional votes to replace Mr. King, all patronage will "return to the Democrats—county residents are manifesting little interest.

When testimony began about 11 a. m., the courtroom was crowded. After about an hour, defendants' attorneys objected to witnesses hearing testimony of those who preceded them. The court was cleared, leaving less than a half dozen spectators and revealing that the crowd was composed almost entirely of witnesses.

Judge Smith expressed his intention of completing the testimony of the judges if it took until midnight. The hearing was recessed at 5 p. m. and began again at 7.

Mahaffey Asks Reelection to Mayor's Post

James F. Mowatt to Oppose Him in Brentwood Race on June 24.

William N. Mahaffey, recently named as mayor of Brentwood, Md., to fill the unexpired term of the late Mayor Lloyd V. Moxley, will seek election to a full term, it was announced yesterday. Elections will be held Monday, June 24.

Opposing Mahaffey in the mayoralty race will be James F. Mowatt. Speculation also is centering on the proposed candidacy of Mrs. Arthur L. Payne, resident of the town for the past 18 years.

It is understood that recently a representative group of citizens had called upon her in an effort to have her enter the race. She has not yet announced her intentions.

Elect Two to Council.

Two members of the council will also be selected in the coming election. These will be in the First and Second wards. Councilman Harry J. Allison, of the First Ward, will not seek reelection, while Second Ward Councilman James E. Dennary expects to leave the community.

J. L. Merkle has announced his candidacy for the First Ward seat, while E. W. Markward and Albert N. Plum seek the Second Ward post.

At a recent session of the town officials, former Mayors E. H. Roberts and James Sampson made it clear they can not be considered candidates for mayor.

Brentwood officials have also announced the town will receive $2,134.56 as its portion of the gasoline tax rebate from the State roads commission. This money will be placed in the road fund for the retirement of road bonds.

Tax Rate 20 Cents.

The town's tax rate has been set at 20 cents on each $100 assessed valuation of real and personal property. There also will be a special fire tax of 10 cents on each $100.

The recently adopted budget for general town expenses, not including street maintenance, has been placed at $4,500. The budget will be in effect July 1, 1935.

It is expected that at the close of the fiscal year, with the return of money borrowed from the general town fund to bolster the road fund, there will be a substantial balance in the general town fund. A total of $725 has been loaned to the road fund.

A committee, composed of all members of the town council, has been appointed to investigate the possibility of constructing an underpass beneath the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks at Bunker Hill road.

This committee will confer with officials of Cottage City in an attempt to obtain Federal funds for the project. It has been argued that an underpass at this point will greatly damage valuable property. Construction at Williams street, one block north, has been suggested.

The present crossway at Bunker Hill road was closed to vehicular traffic several years ago and is now used by pedestrians only.

Woman Innocent Dupe In Check Case; Man Held

A man accused of using an innocent 73-year-old woman to cash allegedly worthless checks for him was arrested by police last night on false pretenses charges.

The man held is Norman A. Genaro, 35, of the 3000 block of Twentieth street northeast. The warrant for him was sworn out by Carl Henry Donch, of a downtown bank, who charges the man received over $200 on one check. Genaro was arrested by Detective Sergt. Eugene Davis, of the fraud squad, who said that Genaro prevailed on Miss Mary Ford, of Silver Spring, Md., to cash the checks for him.

Prince Georges Police Officers Will Be Named

Board of Commissioners to Meet With Democratic Committee Monday.

Appointments to the Prince Georges County police force will be made at a special joint meeting of the board of commissioners and the Democratic State central committee, to be held Monday, it was announced yesterday.

Members of the board of commissioners said that "nearly all" of the present personnel will be reappointed. They declined to indicate who might be dropped.

In addition to the reappointments, the officials will also appoint four additional policemen and a desk clerk for the Hyattsville station. This was recently authorized by the Maryland Legislature.

The board of commissioners, holding its regular weekly session yesterday at Upper Marlboro, received a petition from the Ladies Community Club of the Seat Pleasant district asking that their influence be used in obtaining a county hospital.

No Action Taken.

This idea has already been discussed many times, but because of the lack of funds, no action has been taken. It had been hoped that the county almshouse at Ritchie, Md., would be developed into a hospital.

The community club asked that "a hospital be erected in the county, as there is no State or county hospital nearer than Baltimore, and it would indeed be an improvement as well as a blessing to those in need of such an institution."

They also asked that Valley street in Maryland Park be surfaced, declaring that it was much needed as a thoroughfare and at present was in a bad condition.

The commisioners also received letters from Senator George L. Radcliffe and Representative Stephen W. Gambrill, declaring they were very much in favor of the Bladensburg flood control project and would do all in their power to aid in the move.

Radcliffe Interested.

Senator Radcliffe said: "I am keenly interested in the situation and I hope I can be of some assistance to you."

Gambrill said: "I am very glad to have this resolution (forwarded from the county commissioners, asking their aid in controlling the flood) and you may be assured of my very earnest efforts in endeavoring to secure funds for this project."

Another letter was received from Capt. Edward McK. Johnson, head of the Maryland State police force, expressing his regret that it was impossible to place a patrolman at the intersection of Marion street and the Baltimore boulevard, Hyattsville, during hours when school children were passing.

He pointed out that the State was attempting to patrol the main highways with a very limited number of men, and therefore no patrolmen were available.

The commissioners appointed J. Hammond Tippett, of T. B., Md., as forest warden.

County Weighs Proposal to Tax D. C. Laundries

Montgomery Board May Require License Like That of Hucksters.

Imposition of a special tax on Washington laundries operating in Montgomery County, Md., was considered yesterday by the Montgomery County Commissioners meeting at Rockville, Md.

Commissioner Paul M. Coughlin proposed the new tax, which probably would take the form of a license similar to that required of hucksters. The commissioner declared that the Washington laundries form serious competition to county laundry owners who have to pay the county taxes while the Washington firms do not.

A special committee is to be appointed by Frank H. Karn, president of the board, to make an investigation into feasibility of imposing the tax.

The board authorized collection of disputed front foot benefit charges at the Miller subdivision and adjacent areas in Bethesda on the basis of 50 per cent of approximately $100,000 the improvements cost.

Justice of the Peace Charles Woodson was appointed desk clerk at Silver Spring sub-station of the Montgomery County police to succeed Arthur Burke at a salary of $80 a month, effective May 12.

The board approved bond of $1,000 for Mrs. Mary O'Brien, chief deputy clerk in the county commissioners' office. Revision of minor errors in tax bills upon approval of Ira C. Whitacre, clerk of the board, was approved by the board, in order that collection of taxes might be expedited where there is only a small sum in question.

Prince Georges Notes Increase In Employment

324 Placed by Federal Job Agency in April; PWA Aids Situation.

Prince Georges County's unemployment situation is showing a "considerable improvement" over last year, it has been announced by the Southern Maryland office of the National Reemployment Service.

Pointing to the placement of 324 unemployed persons during April, Claude E. Gaylor, manager of the office at Hyattsville, declared he was greatly encouraged.

At a recent meeting of the National reemployment committee, Mr. Gaylor reported there were 11 PWA projects in the county, for which the committee was furnishing 100 per cent of the labor.

He also reported there were two union jobs for which the committee had been called upon to furnish a few skilled mechanics and all of the unskilled labor. The committee is supplying both skilled and unskilled labor to four private contractors.

The committee, it is said, is having difficulty contacting skilled workmen, as most of these have temporary seasonal employment in private industries. For this reason a general re-registration will be held soon.

A report of committee activities during April disclosed a registration of 103 unemployed persons, of which 73 were men and 30 were women.

Placements for the month were 248 men on PWA projects and in private employment. This latter figure included 51 men and 25 women.

There still remain 5,883 applications for work in the active files, of which 5,470 are men and 413 are women.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 1111 Oak St., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Feasibility of tattooing poultry for the purpose of identification was discussed last night at a meeting of the Montgomery County Poultry Producers Association at the courthouse in Rockville.

Montgomery County poultry producers having suffered losses recently from theft, a drive is being inaugurated by the association to mark poultry in order to trace the ownership when sold on a wholesale market. The plan as presented at last night's meeting is to tattoo the poultry in the web of the wing and register the marking either with the Poultry Producers Association or with the police authorities, or both. Chief of Police J. William Garrett attended the conference and said that he considered the plan a good one, and suggested that the producers register their markings with the State's attorney.

Prof. Roy H. Waite, of the University of Maryland, addressed the meeting on "Feeding Practices," giving formulas for home-mixed rations. Other speakers were Miss Edythe M. Turner, home demonstration agent, and O. W. Anderson, county agent.

Judges to Set Lyddane Trial; Likely June 17

County Board Finds Cost of $855 for 2 Letters in Case Too High.

Date of the Lyddane trial in Rockville probably will be set today after a conference of Circuit Court Justice Charles W. Woodward and the other two judges on the circuit.

Judge Woodward discussed trial dates yesterday with defense and prosecution attorneys and June 17 was found acceptable to the lawyers. If it meets approval of the full bench of three judges, this date is likely to be the one chosen. The trial of Mrs. Anne Lyddane on charges of plotting to murder her husband was originally set for June 4, changed to June 10, and is now to be changed again.

Those who discussed the date yesterday, in addition to Judge Woodward, were State's Attorney James H. Pugh and defense attorneys Stedman Prescott and Robert Peter, jr.

Meanwhile Montgomery County commissioners deferred payment on two bills for stenographic and photostatic copies of letters alleged to have been written by Mrs. Lyddane while she was a secretary in a Rockville bank.

Action will be taken on the two bills Tuesday. The first is for $375 from Ira H. Gulickson, of Washington, and the other for $480 from Bert C. Farrar, examiner of questioned documents in the Treasury Department, once a witness in the Lindbergh kidnapping trial.

Both jobs were ordered by Pugh. Some of the commissioners consider prices too high. Pugh will explain the cost of the notes Tuesday.

3 Night Clubs Plan Openings For This Week

The Habana, Powhatan and Shoreham Due to Start Summer Periods.

By Kay Ware.

This will be a happy week for the night club enthusiast who just can't miss an opening. Tonight the Club Habana outfit starts things moving on the Arlington Roof. Friday Pete Macias opens the Powhatan and Saturday the Shoreham starts the season for white flannels by opening the Terrace.

In addition to all the old Club Habana atmosphere, you'll find a "Sky-Bar" on the Arlington Roof, where, according to the release, "one may sit on a stool while looking over the city, and quaff as of old."

Manager Harnett, of the Powhatan, promises new features there; Pete promises more of his piano playing; Ramon doesn't need to promise anything, for he couldn't be a better host.

The Reyes, Cuban dance team, will not appear at the Shoreham until June 6. Reason? They are to be featured at the inaugural ball of the steamship Normandie after her arrival next Wednesday. So their appearance on the line is "by courtesy of the Shoreham Hotel."

In New York, the Reyes have been doubling and tripling with hotel, night club, vaudeville and picture short engagements. They have been featured on the "Let's Dance" program every Saturday night over N. B. C.

This week sees Roman and Ruth continuing in the Shoreham ballroom with their dances in costume. Ewen Hail, tenor and master of ceremonies, and Janice Thompson, the acrobat from London, also appear.

Today we offer a few pages from the annual report of Sidney, whose orchestra has played, among other places, at the Mayflower, Carlton, Wardman Park, Club Habana and Heigh-Ho.

In closing his books for the season, the musical maestro noted:

The longest party, from 10:30 p. m. until 6:30 a. m., played for a socialite. The shortest one, one minute. This was for the National Radio Forum and followed a rehearsal of two hours, but the speaker used up all the time and Sidney's men were prevented from playing the closing march.

Most difficult instrumentalist to supply on short notice: an organ grinder.

The other night, while Matt Windsor was in the middle of a number, a commotion arose from the stairway, and the Shrine band, playing full blast, marched onto the floor, around the silent Matt, settling down at last to the business of watching the Troika show.

Bill Strickland's Capitolians, carrying on at the Lotus, will step out in summer uniforms and a different one each show. By switching trousers and coats in various combinations they can appear as models of what the well-dressed musician will wear in six individual ways.

Show: Last week's revue held over, with Marrone and Gallo, dance team; Retta Ray, who does the bolera as a single.

A long, low, cabin-like building, overlooking a wide bend in the Potomac—trees along the horizon, chicken dinners in country style—that's River Bend. Plus an enlarged dance floor, with George Reese and his Melodiers furnishing music.

Opening night.

Potomac River Line presents a five-hour cruise aboard the Steamer Potomac tomorrow. The boat leaves Sixth and Water streets at 1 p. m., chugs down to Quantico and back.

No dancing, for it's a family affair in picnic spirit.

Woman Signs Statement Concerning Fatal Fight

Police obtained a signed statement yesterday from Mrs. Nellie Hawkins, 43, questioned concerning a fight Sunday in which Mrs. Masie Heaney, 40, was wounded fatally.

Mrs. Heaney died yesterday in Gallinger Hospital of a skull fracture and other wounds apparently inicted with an iron pipe.

Mrs. Hawkins denied she figured in the wounding of Mrs. Heaney. Police reported she insisted the only person she struck with the pipe was Will Lanson, 42, also in custody since the disturbance at a rooming house in the 400 block Massachusetts avenue northwest, where the trio lived.

District Gets $693,000 Allotment for Relief

Allocations of $600,000 for regular relief in the District and $93,000 for transient relief were announced yesterday. This compares with $774,733 alloted last month.

Commissioner George E. Allen, District relief administrator, said he was pleased with the initial allotment.

"The grant of the Federal authorities, given us today, means that we shall carry forward as we are doing, that nobody is going to starve, and our present relief program is going forward until such time as the new Federal program gets under way," he said.

'Dead' Graduate Joins Reunion.

Liberty, Mo., May 28 (AP).—Graduates of William Jewell College, class of 1910, were remarking today at their reunion what a fine man William E. Hudson, of Smithton, Mo., had been and that it was too bad he died—then Hudson walked in. He had been out of touch wtih the world, he explained, because of work on the farm. By chance, he heard of the reunion.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

I Get a Kick From New York.

Because of the gaudy trivia of Broadway, the spinster correctness of Madison avenue, the groomed sleekness of Park avenue, the rudeness of First, the ruggedness of Tenth, the lorgnetted reserve of Fifth, the rickety elevated trains on Second, and the clamor of trucks on Avenue A.

• • • •

Because I was born in New York City, and "this is my own, my native land."

• • • •

Because of the midnight sailings of the giant ocean liners that go to Europe, with the honking of taxicabs in front of the piers, the shouts of the porters, and the crush of visitors on the gangplanks adding to the excitement of the town's gayest parties.

• • • •

Because you can see the bangtails race at Belmont Saturday afternoon, and pick 'em just as wrong as the Vanderbilts.

• • • •

Because Fulton Market fishmongers charge you 60 cents a pound for fish, and yet give it away free every morning on the docks at 6 o'clock, to the Little Sisters of the Poor, who feed the tenants of the slums.

• • • •

• • • •

Because the only difference between Broadway and Main street is that Broadway is made up of all the Main streeters from every section of the country, who have come here to make good.

• • • •

Because it's a town where you are just as apt to find yourself seated next to Al Smith as Two-Gun Louie.

• • • •

Because of the town's big league attitude. The women are smartly dressed, the men are cosmopolitan, the youngsters know all the answers and yet thousands of us will stand in front of a drug store window to see an out-of-town salesman demonstrate how to strop a razor.

• • • •

Because our theaters offer the greatest shows, and yet the Flea Circus and Minsky's burlesque houses make money every week; because our hospitals offer the greatest surgeons, and yet New Yorkers travel to Minnesota to see the Mayo brothers; because Saratoga offers great natural baths, and yet our residents go to Baden Baden . . . because, in other words, most New Yorkers are delightfully daffy. And if you don't think so, consider that only 13,000 people visit the New York Public Library every day, but 2,000,000 daily read the Broadway columns.

• • • •

Because the city offers the finest food and cooking, any type, that you can find in the whole wide world. They soak you plenty for it, but it's the best.

• • • •

Because the Empire State is the tallest building in the world, and we have on our doorstep the only Statue of Liberty in the world. New Yorkers never visit 'em, but that doesn't stop us from bragging.

• • • •

Because Chinatown, in the Bowery, has funny little crooked streets, almost as crooked as some of our politicians.

• • • •

Because it's a city which is a conveyor-chain of friendships; if you're "in," you can get Row A seat to the Baer-Braddock fight, "fix" traffic violation tickets, get police escorts to radio broadcasts, and otherwise indulge those little yens which mean so much to a depressed ego.

• • • •

Because it's a city where they name sandwiches and night clubs and race horses after you, though the sandwiches will be ham; the night clubs will flop, and the horses will finish last.

• • • •

• • • •

Because it is a city of few physical hazards, completely free of earthquakes, floods and hurricanes, although the taxicab drivers try to compensate for this lack of excitement.

• • • •

Because it is a truly charitable city, raising millions for the poor and the sick year in and year out, and thinking nothing of it, but waging a grim and determined fight for years to prevent the subways from tilting the fare 2 cents.

• • • •

Because few New Yorkers were born here. They all come from out of town, s'help me.

• • • •

Because the natives have a grand sense of humor, and a fine sense of loyalty. They'll laugh at themselves, but they'll rarely laugh at you.

• • • •

Because although you meet a lot of phonies, you learn from meeting the important ones that the bigger they are, the nicer they are!

Elissa Landi Captivates Guests at Reception in Shoreham.

Comptroller O'Connor Is Host; Diplomats and Officials Attend.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

All celebrities come to Washington sooner or later—international heroes, politicians, statesmen, actors, presidents, kings and princes. The latest to captivate Capital society is Elissa Landi, screen star and daughter of an Italian nobleman. Miss Landi arrived Monday from New York on her first visit to Washington and yesterday afternoon the Comptroller of the Currency, Mr. J. F. T. O'Connor, entertained at a large reception at the Shoreham in her honor. The party took place in the west ballroom of the hotel, a large, cool room, where buffet tables were spread with beautiful flowers, a great variety of sandwiches and cakes, and a delicious and refreshing punch. A string orchestra played during the afternoon and the host and Miss Landi received the several hundred guests at the entrance of the room.

Miss Landi wore a charming gown of black chiffon, fashioned with a long skirt and long flowing sleeves edged with a narrow band of white. A small black hat, faced with white ruschings, sat far back on her reddish hair, and a corsage of large gardenias completed the costume.

Assisting Mr. O'Connor were Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, wife of the Undersecretary of the Treasury, who wore a black and white printed frock and a large black hat, and who arrived rather late from the tea given by Mrs. Henry A. Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury; Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, wife of the Assistant Secretary of War, who wore a suit of dark blue chiffon with a pale yellow organza ruffle at the throat and a small hat of natural straw faced with dark blue and trimmed with sprays of mimosa; Miss Josephine Roche, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, in gray chiffon; Mrs. Blair Bannister, assistant treasurer of the United States, wearing a large black hat; Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan in sheer black with an enormous black hat; Mrs. Robert V. Fleming, in a navy blue printed crepe and a small blue hat, and Mrs. Robert Olin Young, who wore a printed crepe in gay colors.

Californians Attend.

Mr. O'Connor has spent much time in California and has many friends among the motion picture stars; so it was most fitting that he entertain for Miss Landi during her stay here. Among the Californians at the tea yesterday were Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, Representative Florence P. Kahn, Representative and Mrs. John F. Dockweiler and Mrs. George Burnham, wife of Representative Burnham.

Others there were Mrs. Harry Baxter, wife of the Assistant Secretary of War, and Mrs. George H. Dern, in a frock of pale blue crepe and a large brown hat; Mrs. Evelyn Walker, who arrived in riding clothes, with her lovely blonde head bare; Mrs. J. Bruce Kramer, with her daughter, Mrs. Anne Young, the latter a picture in a frock of raspberry chiffon with a large pink banded hat to match; the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Lawrence W. Robert, who set the style yesterday for a white linen coat with gray trousers.

There were several others in linen, among them Mr. Turner Battle, Assistant Secretary of Labor, and Mr. Sol A. Rosenblatt. Senator Joseph Guffey wore white flannels, as did a number of others.

De Withs' Daughter Attends.

Others there were Miss Nora de With, daughter of the Minister of the Netherlands and Mme. Van Haersma de With, escorted by Mr. H. M. van der Wyck, secretary of the legation; the Minister of the Irish Free State, Mr. Michael MacWhite; the Assistant Secretary of War, Mr. Woodring; Mr. W. Forbes Morgan, Miss Bessie Gill in a costume of citron yellow with a large black hat, and Miss Katherine Fechet, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. James Fechet, in an enchanting frock of embroidered white mousseline de soie, fashioned with a long flowing skirt, and a large black hat. Nearby were Capt. Curtis DeWare, Lieut. Townsend Griffiss, Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Diggs, Mme. Petroff Tchomakoff, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of Bulgaria, and her sister-in-law, Mlle. Others present were Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General; Mrs. Stanley Reed, wife of the Solicitor General; Judge and Mrs. J. Crawford Biggs, the latter in a chiffon frock of the pale tints with a large hat of robin's-egg blue trimmed with flat quills of pale apricot; Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, in a black and white printed crepe with a large black hat, the crown of which was entirely of pink rose petals; Mrs. Royal S. Charm Keynote For Hot Months Is Daintiness

By Ruth Anne Davis.

NO WOMAN is totally unattractive if she is dainty. She may be a quiet little person with mouse-colored hair, and about as much style as a potato, but if she can command that one quality, daintiness, she has an unfailing feminine allure.

Haven't you ever noticed how men react to dainty women? Vivacious redheads, languid brunettes and cuddly blondes are not in the running when it comes to the woman, no matter how nondescript her type, who has made daintiness the keynote to her personality.

During this season of the year it is up to us all to think more and more about daintiness. Let summer come, and thousands will fall back into the ranks of wispy-looking, hot, tired people. Others will go ahead looking cool, fresh and dainty.

Just why do some drop back and others go forward? Unfortunately there are still many women who do not know that modern science has provided means to keep them as fresh and dainty during hot, humid days as during the less trying weather. One means lies in a certain magic liquid put up by a large and well-known beauty concern, a deodorant unlike any other we know about.

In the first place, only a few drops are necessary to protect you from perspiration odors. In the second place, you may use it at any time whatsoever. It is guaranteed to be free from any injurious ingredients. When you put it on it dries in a few minutes, is not uncomfortable and will not injure your clothing. You can see what advantages this deodorant has over others. Keep it on your toilet table and you have a real friend close at hand, ready to aid you at all times. Remember the value of daintiness and compare this with the price of the deodorant.

Brushes Help, Too.

Lots of women who have thought all winter that their skin was abnormally dry are finding it more on the oily side, now that the weather is warmer. As summer comes on, the skin will continue to be oilier, pores will open, dirt will seep in and blackheads literally thrive.

The surest means to control your skin, and keep in perfectly normal is to wash it at least once a day with a good soap and a complexion brush. If you have a very sensitive and delicate skin you should use a soft brush that will not irritate your skin. Most complexion brushes have firm bristles to stimulate circulation and comb the skin for dust and dirt. The first few times they are used the bristles seem uncomfortably hard, but later they soften and the skin becomes adapted to this form of treatment.

It isn't to be denied that most such brushes are expensive. They have exceptionally fine bristles, especially selected, the wood being hard and sturdy and able to stand the strain of being so constantly wet.

Now a certain beauty authority puts out some complexion brushes at considerably less than most—and strangely enough—better than most others, too. The bristles on her brushes are extremely fine pointed, enabling them to go into the fine lines and pores and loosen dirt clinging there.

We know for a fact that one of these brushes will last like the rock of ages. Even with daily using, both morning and night, it will be as good as new at the end of the year, and good for years to come.

A New Low for Toilet Sets.

There might have been a time when you'd think any toilet set which cost no more than $1.95 couldn't be much of a set. No more. One-ninety-five will buy lovely sets which look as if they would cost many times that much.

See those in the toilet goods department of a local store. Combination composition and enamel sets, including comb, brush, mirror, and powder jar, are real bargains for this price.

The buyer for this department admits he bought a lot of these sets for a certain purpose. He says he believes a lot of families who will move down to beach cottages during the summer will need nice-looking, inexpensive things to give them the finishing touches. For the dressing table he is ready and waiting with these lovely looking toilet sets, selling at such an absurdly low price.

A Suggestion for Furrows.

Query: I have two rather deep furrows across my forehead. Can you suggest how I might drive them away.—T. R.

Answer: Why don't you try wearing one of the contour bands sold in a local store. These fit snugly and help iron out such creases. Send a self-addressed stamped envelope and we'll be glad to tell you the name of the store and the band. The price is $1.

Ramona, Singing Pianist, Happiest When Working

MOST PERSONS worry because they are "overworked" and never can find time for the things they really want to do. But not so Ramona, pianist with Paul Whiteman's Orchestra, who admitted yesterday between shows at a local theater that "the more work I have to do, the better I like it."

Then, this pretty, peppy girl, who will tell you almost anything except her full name, combed her brown hair back of her ears, spread on her lipstick and admitted she hadn't had a vacation for six years. "Because—well, now, what would I do with a vacation Stop playing the piano, just for a rest? Certainly not. Would I travel? Certainly not, because that's what I do almost every week I'm working. Then how could I have any fun on a vacation?" She laughed, flashing a row of unusually even teeth.

Beginning as a pianist in amateur contests at the age of 17, Ramona—now only 23—has already conquered three professional worlds. She has done radio work, until she feels as much at home before the microphone as she does before a dressing-room mirror. She has been a concert pianist long enough to decide she prefers playing with an orchestra. And she has played with an orchestra long enough to be convinced it's "more fun than anything you can imagine."

RAMONA, pianist with Paul Whiteman's Orchestra, thrives on hard work.

Two More Ambitions.

But still she isn't satisfied. She wants to get to the top in two other fields before she retires to a "quiet little country place" to spend the rest of her life cooking, "which is what I'd rather do than anything else domestic," she said. "I cook sometimes, even now. Ask the boys in the orchestra how they like my fried chicken."

Then she confessed she would like to play in musical comedy a year or two. After that she wants to "do a couple of movies," and then she plans to get out of the performance game entirely because, in her own words, "there's nothing so sad as a falling star. I can't think of anything worse than hanging on too long. Every newspaper I pick up has a story about someone trying to make a 'comeback' in the movies. How tragic! I certainly don't want to stay in anything long enough to stage a 'comeback.'"

A bell rang. In five minutes Ramona would be out on the stage, seated at a piano, ready for the show. Did she ever get tired of doing the same act five times a day?

Never Tires of Work.

Never, she said. It was work—yes. But it was also "more fun" than anything else she had ever tried. Persons who get tired of working, she believes, are those who aren't doing the type of work in which they can really express themselves. "I am, I know," she said, "so why shouldn't I be happiest when I am working? And why should I ever want a vacation? I'll take mine when I retire," she laughed again.

But, in the meantime, this pianist who holds the record for being the first girl to play with a recording orchestra still has plenty to do. There is musical comedy for her yet (she hopes) . . . and then the movies . . . before a vacation, and the cookstove.

Correct Eating Is First Step To Stop Generation of Gas

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

MANY persons complain of "gas on the stomach," and there are some who are chronic "belchers." In many this is merely a bad habit with no effort toward control; in others it causes much chagrin. The symptom is due, for the most part, to rapid eating or drinking, or to the improper mastication of food.

Air that finds its way into the stomach is swallowed. There are certain individuals who are fairly constant swallowers. They perform the act more frequently during periods of excitement, nervousness, or embarrassment, and each time a certain amount of air is carried into the stomach. Much of the oxygen contained in swallowed air is absorbed, but if any appreciable amount remains there may be a sense of fullness, of actual discomfort, or even of pain. Those who state that they "bloat" after meals are generally air swallowers, inasmuch as careful X-ray studies have shown little if any air in the small bowel.

Gas Generated Is Negligible.

Only a small amount of fermentation occurs in the stomach; in fact, for all practical purposes we may say that the amount of gas generated in this digestive pouch is negligible. On the other hand, unless normal contractions proceed at fairly regular intervals the colon may produce a considerable amount of gas. Much of this will be carbon dioxide, which is rather promptly absorbed into the circulation and excreted via the lungs. Certain other gases, however, are the products of incomplete digestion or of putrefaction. Nitrogen as such is either not absorbed or is absorbed very slowly, and hydrogen sulphide will traverse the intestinal tract and be expelled from the rectum. Anything that interferes with the power of the blood to absorb gas as, for example, in anemia with fewer red cells than normal, favors its collection in the intestines.

Eating Habits Important.

With many individuals, eating certain foods is accompanied by intestinal putrefaction. For the most part these are proteins and foods high in cellulose (vegetable fiber). If an unusual number of bacteria exist in the bowel or if the foods are improperly chewed or poorly cooked, putrefaction will result.

Now and then flatulence may have a nervous origin. The individual may be worried, apprehensive, or fearful with the result that the normal functioning of the digestive tract is interfered with. The condition is fairly common in young men who are classed as neurotics. These patients, when carefully examined, show no physical defects whatever. The nervous patient will frequently waken in the middle of the night "filled with gas," as he says, and belching will usually relieve the symptom. Many of these people do well on small doses of grandmother's favorite remedy—pepperment tea. Hot packs over the abdomen and sedative drugs will help.

Constipation, of course, will need to be corrected and in this condition the formation of proper habits and the use of the mildest possible laxative is advised. Strong laxatives will generally aggravate the condition.

Individuals who are gas generators should first attempt to correct eating habits. Peas and beans of all varieties should be omitted from the diet. For the time being sugar should be restricted entirely, although starchy foods may be used if thoroughly cooked and masticated. It is usually well for a time to restrict fluids at mealtime, including tea and coffee.

If ordinary means fail to relieve the condition, the physician will search for some infection along the intestinal tract, such as a chronic gall bladder or chronic appendix. Careful examination will point the way to the correction of colon fermentation through the detection of the type of food that remains undigested or only partially dissolved. The diet may then be modified with excellent results.

Birth Control Move Gaining

Favorable Action Taken by 11 State Units of Federation.

RECENT ACTION by the Rhode Island Federation of Women's Clubs in support of birth control legislation brings the number of State federations indorsing such legislation up to eleven, according to an announcement yesterday from the office of Margaret Sanger.

This action is preliminary to consideration of the subject by the General Federation of Women's Clubs at its meeting June 4 to 12 in Detroit.

Within the last six weeks State federations of Arizona, Arkansas, Iowa, Virginia, West Virgina, North Carolina and Rhode Island have passed resolutions indorsing "efforts to secure an amendment to exempt licensed physicians, hospitals and clinics from the Federal laws which now exclude supplies and medical literature relating to birth control from the United States mails and common carriers." The Maine federation passed a resolution reading, "Because of the over 4,000,000 families depending on Federal relief and the 250,000 babies born to these families, the federation is in favor of the relief administration taking steps as to prevent the recurrence of such situations."

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: The problem I am about to outline has never been touched on in your column nor, so far as I know, in any other column. Therefore, I have decided to boldly broadcast my worry to the world. My trouble is that I write poetry, and I am not the type to write poetry. Nevertheless, at intervals I am moved to write. For absolutely no reason sentences begin running around in my head. They seem to pop up from nowhere and become so insistent that I am forced to put them down on paper for relief. For an hour or two I just write. Nervous and jittery, I write. I don't feel this way at any other time, and when a poem is finished, and the mood vanishes, I read my work over incredulously.

* * * *

Fortunately, these "spells" do not occur often. Often months will pass before I get the urge to add another verse or two to one of my poems. Only occasionally do I write an entire poem at one time. When, finally, one of these "masterpieces" is done, I am exhausted, puzzled, relieved, amazed, pleased and greatly annoyed. Now, what do you think? Is it just an emotional outlet? Do other persons do this, too? Have you ever heard of poems being conceived in this manner? Doesn't it seem strange that this (whatever it is) keeps going? Certainly I have made no effort; given it no encouragement. If I were married or working (I am neither) would I stop writing poetry? I am 23 years old; I am not particularly intelligent; I haven't had much education; I am not working, principally because I'm too lazy to look for anything to do, I guess.

* * * *

What do people do with poems after they write them? I have never shown these poems to anyone; have never told anyone about them, even though I have been so "afflicted" since childhood. Until the last few years I just threw them away. One day, however, I realized that I was going to keep right on writing poetry whether I wanted to or not, so I decided to save them—some of them anyway.

* * * *

Please give me an answer. I have always had an idea that poets were kind of odd. I am not. Perhaps I should say—not yet. My "talent" is getting me morbid. I have a lot of friends (who never suspect my humorous secret), I run around a good deal; have a normal life except for those darn poems. If you don't answer me I'll never tell anyone else. I couldn't get the nerve the second time, so please help me.

DEAR MISS 1935: Persons more conservant than I with the phenomena of poetry production say your emotional experience while authoring verse is a sensation familiar to nearly all poets.

"Poetry writing, unlike creative prose, is very seldom the result of voluntary effort," says Mrs. Edith Mirick, 3314 Newark street northwest, well-known Washington poetry critic. "Usually it is written almost involuntarily, in response to an emotional 'push' from within. It may be called the product of emotional inspiration, and it may be either very good or very bad."

* * * *

Mrs. Mirick's opinion is corroborated by that of Mrs. Hope Ridings Miller, editor of The Post's weekly column of verse, who is herself a poet and the daughter of a poet-mother. Both agree your experience is "the normal experience of most poetry writers."

* * * *

What do persons do with poems after they write them? If they are generous, courageous and intelligent poets, they offer their products to the proper authorities for critical opinion. And if their work is good, it thereupon finds its way into contemporary or lasting literature.

I suggest, in this instance, that you get in touch with Miss Mirick by mail and make arrangements to have her give a critical opinion of your work. She is sympathetically as well as professionally interested in helping promising young poets find a market for their writings.

M. H.

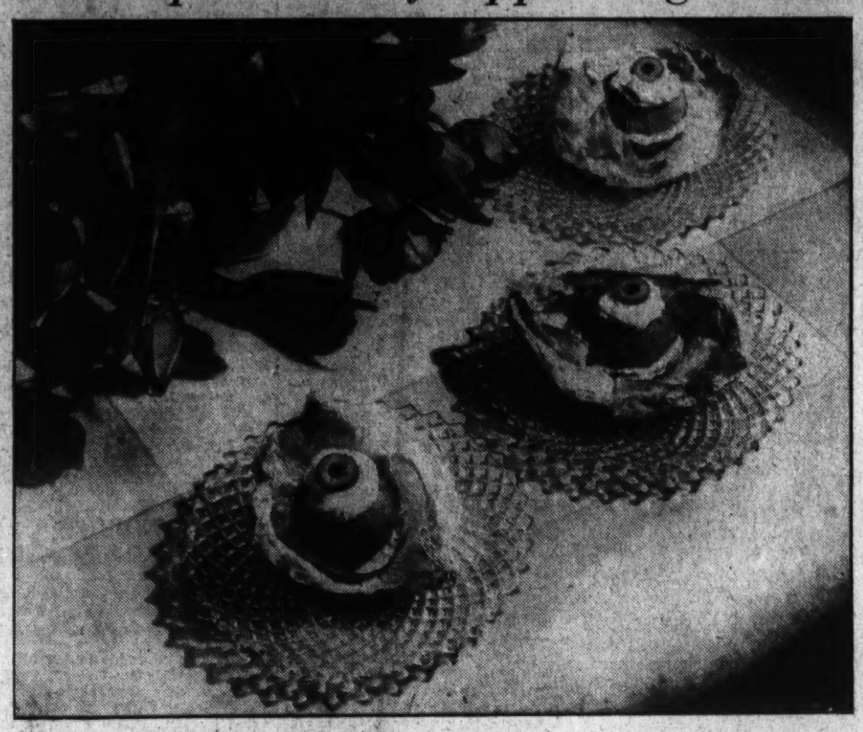
Class Advocates Opening Engineer Course to Coeds

Coeds would be admitted to the Newark College of Engineering if this year's seniors had their way. When a questionnaire was circulated in the graduating class 64 men voted in favor of making the college coeducational. Only 12 voted against it.

When asked if women in the professions should receive the same consideration as men, 52 of the seniors said "yes" while 24 said "no." But when the question of married women holding jobs came up, 53 seniors were against it while 23 said they didn't mind.

Thirteen of those who voted declared a preference for blondes. Other votes were divided among several types. Sixty-two said they were not seriously interested in matrimony at the present time. Five said they doubted if they had advanced mentally during their four years at college.

Special Attention Demanded by Greens In Preparation of Appetizing Salads



This stuffed tomato salad with its filling of soft creamy cheese and generous topping of mayonnaise dressing serves a two-fold purpose for today's dinner menu. It solves the meat substitute and salad problem with one stroke.

By Dorothea Duncan.

WE ARE counting on salads to be that much needed inspiration for hot weather menus. So let's get busy and check up on the important "do's" of salad making. Remember the requisites of a salad of character—the salad must be cool, crisp, piquant and colorful. A mediocre salad has no place at the table.

Don't ever dash off a salad in a frenzy and expect it to meet all the qualifications of an inspiring dish. The greens demand special attention. Wash them first in a stream of cold water, and after you are certain that no grit or dirt remains on the leaves, shake them gently free of all clinging drops of water. Store the greens away in the refrigerator for at least an hour to crisp. If you are minus a vegetable hydrator, a clean damp cloth or a bit of waxing paper will do very well to protect the greens from becoming dry.

Blend at Last Minute.

If the salad is to consist entirely of greens, it should be blended at the last minute before serving with an appropriate dressing. The blending is done best with a few deft strokes of a fork. If a heavy spoon is used the salad will have a beaten down look instead of a jaunty, perky air. Careful tossing of the greens will give them an attractive stand-upish look which is always so much more appealing to the eye than that flat to the plate appearance.

Other salad ingredients, meat, vegetables and fruit should be cut in uniform and shapely pieces. Fish is more attractive if flaked. Tomatoes may be cut in thin slices or wedges, depending upon the arrangement of the salad and the other ingredients. These, too, must be chilled and kept as free from moisture as possible.

The blending of the above groups of salad ingredients is often accomplished by marinating, or mixing with a bit of piquant French dressing and chilling in the refrigerator until the ingredients are seasoned. Chicken and some vegetables may also be blended with a small amount of mayonnaise dressing and allowed to chill until flavored and seasoned.

The marinated vegetables are then removed to a crisp bed of greens and served with additional dressing, if desired.

The arrangement of salad ingredients is a most important feature if they are to appeal to the eye. The salad materials should be handled as little as possible, and piled lightly on plates or in bowls.

Simple garnishes do much to make a salad, not already elaborate, attractive. Edible garnishes are the most popular and usually the easiest to make. Garnishes should always correspond in flavor to the salad ingredients. For example, vegetable salads may be enlivened with radish roses, celery curls, green pepper rings or red pimiento strips. Pickle fans, ripe or green olives and sections or slices of hard-cooked eggs may be used for fish or meat salads. Chopped nuts, maraschino or fresh cherries, jelly cubes, sprigs of mint or orange sections add a bright note to fruit salads.

Molded salads find a special place on summer menus. The sparkle of bright-colored gelatin makes a perfect background for leftover vegetables, fruits, and even chicken or seafood. They are special favorites of the housewife because they can be made up the day before and be kept in readiness in the refrigerator.

What Today Means

"Gemini."

IF MAY 29 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. to 12:15 p. m., from 3:15 to 5:15 p. m. and from 8:15 to 10:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:15 to 8:15 a. m., from 1:15 to 3:15 p. m. and from 5:15 to 7:15 p. m.

It may not be wise to make patience a virtue today, if you find someone trying to take undue advantage of your consideration regarding a personal affair. It might be well to pin a friend down to a definite date, should one suggest a vague or indefinite engagement. Avoid allowing personal interests of a social nature to interfere with business appointments, as complications may develop.

Today should be auspicious for the arbitration of legal or business differences if entered into with a spirit of fairness. Influences on this date will probably incline the average person to be generous. It is likely to be dangerous for scandal mongers today, for a desire, which will be more or less generally prevolent, for fair play, may prompt unpleasant action on the part of listeners. Married and engaged couples, as well as those engaged in Cupid's game, will display good sense if they avoid starting any sort of an argument during the next 24 hours.

If a woman and May 29 is your birthday, you should be watchful that possessing such strength of character, as you do, it does not cause you to expect too much of those who are unfortunately weak, when it comes to the way of the flesh.

Doing Mixed With Learning At This School

Progressive Education Basis Worked Out at Maryland Institution.

A BOY MAY LEARN more about wood from working at a woodpile than by reading half a dozen books on forestry. Ten volumes about fire, read by a boy, have less meaning to him than the sharp reality of touching is fingers to a hot stove for half a second.

So believes Maj. Enoch Barton Garey, founder and president of the Rose Garey School near Havre de Grace Md., who has worked on the basis of progressive education that "doing is learning" in establishing a school whereby boys are prepared for life as well as for college.

Without departing too radically from more generally accepted methods of education (the school meets the requirements of the entrance examination board for admission to leading colleges) this institution offers a number of unique advantages.

Experiments Succeed.

Maj. Garey, who was recently in Washington, described some of the features that were inaugurated as experiments when the school opened in 1933 and have proved successful during the two years the school has been in session.

Assuming that every normal boy has an inward flame of curiosity and latent ability to be useful in some worthy activity, Maj. Garey makes a special study of the background and personality of each pupil in order to discover his "particular bent or inward urge."

The primary aim of members of the faculty, acording to Maj. Garey, "is to interpret life—not only from textbooks, but as a whole—in order to guide each boy specifically along the lines in which he is most interested and at the same time to lead him into other fields, where he may find new worlds to conquer."

Maj. Garey further explained that in his school "an impetus and initiative within, is what is asked of each boy. Our job is to inspire in him response, respect and affection," he said.

With these aims in mind, instructors at the Garey School are teaching boys many things besides dull facts. They are teaching history, for example, by the most progressive methods. Recognizing that "history is more than drab books, and that thrilling important events are in the making," instructors are interpreting the colorful past in terms of how it can explain the present.

Mathematics also is taugh from the standpoint of its practical importance. "This study is meaningless to the normal boy unless he is convinced that it is useful," Maj. Garey pointed out.

Study Nature.

As founder and president of the school, Maj Carey has brought many new and vital ideas for elementary education to his institution. It would seem his years of experience as a soldier, an author, a teacher and a college president should make him the ideal head of such a school. A graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point, he served as a lieutenant colonel during the World War. Since then he has successfully filled the position as professor of military science and tactics John Hopkins University and as president of his own alma mater, St. John's College in Annapolis, Md. In the latter school he revived the spirit, raised the standards and enhanced the prestige of the institution.

With him as president, the Garey School designed along Socratic lines should set a new pace in the realm of education, as an institution where boys not only master the knowledge that comes from textbooks, but also have an opportunity "to learn by doing" such practical things as cutting wood, milking cows, feeding hogs and tending the furnace.

Bank Bill Held Means for U. S. To 'Rig' Market

Mills Says Act of '35 Would Tempt Government to Exploitation.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 28.—Odgen L. Mills, former Secretary of the Treasury, charged tonight that the proposed banking act of 1935 would tempt the Government to "rig" the money market to its own advantage.

Addressing the Harvard Business School Club, he said the Government should not regulate the money market because, "as the biggest lender and borrower, it has too large a selfish interest."

After declaring the bill virtually subverts the basic purposes of the Federal Reserve System, Mills said:

"It changes the system from an agency intended to accommodate industry, commerce and agriculture into the instrumentality of a so-called 'planned economy.'"

Under the bill, he charged, the system "is to become just another executive bureau" since the Federal Reserve Board is to "control the bank officers and the President is to control the board."

"It (the bill) largely impairs the automatic character of currency expansion and contraction," said Mills. "It threatens the soundness of the currency because of the quality of assets that may be placed back of it and because of the lack of restraints upon almost unlimited expansion.

"It permits compulsory loans by the banks to the Treasury. It destroys the autonomy of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and vests in the board the power of initiation and actual management.

"The Administration is provided with the set-up governments always seek when they mean to stray from the straight and narrow path of sound public finance. It enables it to enjoy a well-nigh unlimited source of credit, without being compelled to borrow in the normal sense and under normal restrictions."

By the Associated Press.

Contending the present system gave private bankers the power to "create depression or decree prosperity at will," Louis B. Ward, Washington representative of Father Charles E. Coughlin's National Union for Social Justice, yesterday urged that a Government-owned central bank bill be substituted for the pending omnibus bank measure.

Appearing before a Senate banking sub-committee as a self-styled "lobbyist" for a central bank proposal Father Coughlin drafted for Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, Ward declared:

"The present banking system, with its creation of a system of credit money and operating under the Federal Reserve act, puts the power over money and credit in the hands of the bankers and gives them the power to create depression or decree prosperity at will. Such power over money and credit is sanctioned by law under the present Federal Reserve act.

"The theory of recapturing the money power by the people and placing that power under Congress, where it belongs, is attacked by such as Banker Warburg, who said in his testimony on the omnibus bank bill, 'The Government would not have the courage to stop a boom.'

"But the converse of Banker Warburg's statement is the important thing for America. Neither would the Government have the courage to start a depression. The boom is stopped by calling more loans and the depression is caused by calling loans and stopping credit.

"The Nye-Sweeney bill aims at correcting this monstrous injustice. It would take out of the hands of private bankers this power over prosperity and put into the hands of the Government the control of money and credit to be administered for the good of all."

Ward told the committee Father Coughlin appreciated its invitation to testify, but could not appear personally.

D. C. Man Reports Dog Lost.

Loss of a brown Boston terrier answering to the name of "Boss" was reported to the police yesterday by A. J. Brylawski, Washington real estate man. The dog, five months old, has a white collar, white apron feet, white blaze in the middle of face, and white spot on his right ear. A reward is offered by Brylawski, whose home is 3509 34th street, northwest.

The Federal Diary

Trade-Mark Registered U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

CHAIN letters received a death blow at Treasury yesterday afternoon in a strongly worded order from the Secretary's office prohibiting employe participation. The order is similar to that issued at Post-office Department and numerous other Government agencies.

BAKER.

The order from Guy T. Helvering, commissioner of Internal Revenue, follows:

"It has come to the Department's attention that the 'chain letter' system is being participated in by Treasury personnel. Participation, solicitation, or connection in any manner with any chain letter scheme in buildings housing Treasury personnel, either during or outside of official hours, is strictly forbidden, and any violation of this prohibition will be considered as the basis for serious disciplinary action.

"Please bring this immediately to the attention of all officers and employes in your organization."

The first chain letters, the dime species, appeared and spread overnight throughout the departments about three weeks ago. Five or ten days later the fad seemed to have died out equally as rapid. Then, last week, a new variety, the dollar brand, which required a sales talk for circulation, appeared and still is widely popular.

Early in the chain fad, several departments prohibited employes from using Government stationery. The new series of orders is regarded as nipping in advance any further spread of the chain idea, which in some quarters seems destined to soar to the $5 and $10 heights with further fantastic schemes of circulation.

Federal Diary readers are invited to write on this subject (or on any other subject affecting Federal personnel. For each letter favoring or opposing section 213 that is published, a pair of tickets to one of the Loew's theaters will be awarded. The letters will be published in pairs—one for and one against the clause. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters must not exceed 250 words.

Opposing Section 213.

"Dear Mr. Baker: In any reduction of personnel, section 213 provides for a mandatory dismissal; first of all, of married persons "living with husband or wife." These five words are enough to condemn the law. Section 213 throws out the faithful spouse for no other crime but that of loyalty in marriage which heretofore has been considered the foundation of civilized society.

"Section 213 penalizes marriage, and places a premium on celibacy, desertion, divorce and concubinage. Section 213 requires contemptible spying and snooping for its enforcement.

"Like other bad causes it can be defended by specious arguments, for you can always get lawyers on both sides of a question, but a solid argument in favor of section 213 can not be produced. You have no need of 250 words to condemn this shabby legislation; the five words quoted above are enough. More than enough.

"Kindly bear in mind that these are not the views of a modern young man but of an old man of experience whose wife has never worked for the Government.

"H. M. F. (P)."

Favoring Section 213.

"Dear Mr. Baker:

"The married person's clause stated that in reduction of personnel of Government bureaus, preference is given to families having one income over families having two or more incomes. This clause was made law by Congress for the economic purpose of preventing an increase of those on relief and for the humane purpose of preventing an increase of human suffering.

"With thousands of families having no income and one-third of the population on relief, there can be no reason for married couples doing Government work. The claim that their places can not be filled by others can not be justified. If either the husband or wife were dismissed, their places could be ably filled by competent unemployed. If experience is required, promotion has been the solution.

"The merit system can not always serve as a guide for dismissals. To dismiss an employe who is the sole bread winner in the family because he has a lower rating than the one above him who belongs to a family having two or more incomes is not only unjust, but inhumane, and, since no two heads grade alike, under another boss it is posible that the ratings might be reversed.

"It is the duty of every Congressman to work for the greatest good for the greatest number. Employment must be spread. The Congressman who votes for repeal of clause 213 should not be re-elected. The clause, however, should be made uniform in its application to all Government agencies, including emergency work.

"S. W. B. (P)."

Maryland NRA Cases Sure to Be Dropped; Business Men Protest

Labor Chiefs Plan Big Mass Meeting

Union Workers to Stop Work Tomorrow for 'March.'

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 28.—While business leaders offered suggestions for salvaging some of the "benefits" of the NRA codes, it appeared certain today that several hundred Maryland cases involving alleged NRA violations would be dropped.

"Nothing, probably," was the answer given by Arthur E. Hungerford, State NRA director, to a question of what would be done about violation cases in view of the Supreme Court decision invalidating the codes.

Expresses "Disappointment."

Saying he was "disappointed" at the decision because "there were a number of good features of the NRA," Harry W. Walker, executive secretary of the State Independent Retail Grocers Association, added that it leaves the "outlaws free to do as they please."

He said that if the association can do anything, it would "try to keep the benefits." Walker pointed out that any action taken in the future would be voluntary in nature.

"There were many benefits under the NRA," said G. H. Pouder, executive vice president of the Baltimore Association of Commerce. "If a merchant wants to retain those benefits, he can."

Labor leaders continued plans for "one of the greatest mass meetings in the history of the State," to be held here tomorrow to proclaim labor's stand on the matter.

Joseph P. McCurdy, president of the Maryland and District of Columbia Federation of Labor, called upon all local union members to stop work at 2:30 p. m. and march to the meeting hall "prepared to fight to maintain conditions gained under the NRA."

McCurdy also warned that "if employers try to take undue advantage of the collapse of the NRA, it will bring about a chaotic condition."

The collapse of the NRA has brought on a state of emergency, according to sea-food packers in the crab industry in Maryland.

Strong representattions to Senator Millard E. Tydings to "do something about protecting sponge crabs" were intimated from several points. Telegrams were being prepared today to be sent to him, outlining the alleged crisis.

Swepson Earle, State conservation commissioner, admitted that with the collapse of the code governing the blue crab industry a serious situation had arisen in regard to sponge crabs.

Crabs Unprotected.

It was asserted that Virginia's conservation law made it lawful for "any person holding proper license to take or catch sponge crabs from any of the waters of the State at any time from April 1 to June 30, inclusive, in any year, notwithstanding any other law to the contrary." These are the critical months in which the egg-laying crustaceans are carrying the heavy "sponge" in which their eggs are secreted.

The female crabs need a greater salinity than the Upper Bay presents for the development of the eggs, it was said, and so migrate to the lower Chesapeake, in Virginia waters. There they were protected by the NRA code, which prohibited them from being taken at any time. Packers declare that now, however, they may be taken freely and in any quantity.

Utility Wage Cuts Not Anticipated

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 28.—Although anticipating no immediate downward adjustment of wages, members of the State corporation commission said today any wage cutting as a result of NRA's collapse would call for a readjustment of valuations and rates of utility companies.

"Operation costs" of all major utility companies in Virginia rose after passage of the NRA, it was pointed out after a conference of Thomas W. Oxlin, commission chairman, with R. E. Steele, the assessor.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Williamsburg, Va., May 28.—For the first time in many years the commencement exercises at the College of William and Mary in Virginia will be held outdoors. The commencement program will cover a period of three days, June 8-10, and arrangements are being perfected for the graduation exercises, June 10, to be held on the west front of the historic Sir Christopher Wren Building where President Roosevelt made an address when John Stewart Bryan was inaugurated as president of William and Mary in 1934. Weather permitting, several other features of the commencement program will be arranged out of doors.

Virginia's two Senators will participate in the commencement day program. Senator Harry Flood Byrd as the baccalaureate speaker and Senator Carter Glass as the recipient of the honorary degree of doctor of laws. Mr. Bryan will preside and degrees will be conferred upon approximately 230 graduates.

Important features on alumni day, June 8, will be in honor of the memory of Dr. Lyon Gardiner Tyler, president of the college from 1888 to 1919. The day's program will open with a meeting of the alumni association in the auditorium of Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall at which alumni medallions will be awarded by Mr. Bryan. J. Gordon Bohannon, 1902, of Petersburg, member of the State board of education, will deliver the memorial address.

After this meeting memorial services at the grave of Col. Benjamin S. Ewell will be held under the auspices of Virginia Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa. Channing M. Hall, 1908, of Williamsburg, vice president of Alpha Chapter, will preside.

After the alumni luncheon in the college refectory the David J. King Infirmary will be dedicated. The principal address at these exercises will be made by Dr. R. F. Simms, 1923, of Richmond. During the afternoon Alpha of Virginia Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa will hold a meeting in the Apollo room of the Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall. In the evening an alumni dance will be held in Blow Gymnasium.

June 9 will be baccalaureate day. The sermon will be preached by Rev. H. W. B. Donegan, rector of St. James Church of New York City. These exercises will be held in the auditorium of Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

The commencement day program will begin with a senior breakfast in the college refectory followed by senior class exercises in Player's Dell in Matoaka Park, adjoining the campus. The president's reception will be held in the foyer of Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall and will be followed by the graduation exercises at the Wren Building. If the weather is inclement the graduation exercises will be held in the auditorium of Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall. The commencement ball will be held in Blow Gymnasium that evening beginning at 10 o'clock.

Blossom Queen

MISS ADELAIDE WISE AMES.

Eastern Shore Will Celebrate Potato Harvest

First Crop Festival to Be Opened at Keller, Va., Tomorrow.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Salisbury, Md., May 28.—A queen is to reign over the 45,000-acre potato belt of the Eastern Shore of Virginia and lower Maryland tomorrow and Thursday, heralding the approach of another harvesting season.

A potato blossom festival is to be held on those days with all the regal splendor that attends the coronation of apple, cherry or dogwood blossoms, and preparations have been completed for entertainment of thousands of visitors.

The fair grounds at Keller, Va., in the center of this potato empire, will provide the setting for the coronation of Miss Adelaide Wise Ames, of Cheriton, Va., as Queen Eastern Shore I. She will be attended by Miss Gertrude Chance, of Melfa, Va., as maid of honor, 14 princesses and 14 maids. All other features of the festival will be held at Keller.

Dozens of Eastern Shore communities are to participate in the two-day program. For the two Virginia counties of Accomac and Northampton there will be semi-holidays, with all public schools suspending classes.

Coronation in Evening.

The coronation will take place tomorrow evening, climaxing several sports events of the day and a baby parade in the afternoon.

Thursday's program includes a parade of elaborately decorated floats to be reviewed by the young queen, an historical pageant, military drills, beach drill by Coast Guardsmen and a sham battle by National Guard units.

It is the first time maturity of the region's major crop has been celebrated and the whole area is aiding in preparations. The potato belt comprises Northampton and Accomac Counties, Virginia; Worcester County and parts of Wicomico and Somerset in lower Maryland.

Crops Diversified.

The Virginia sector alone planted 90,000 acres of white potatoes a decade ago when hundreds of growers staked their entire year's labors upon the production of this single crop. In more recent years farmers have turned to diversification and this year the two Virginia counties have planed but 33,500 acres, according to W. O. Strong, Federal-State agricultural agent. Approximately 12,000 acres have been planted in the Maryland section.

It was potatoes that attained for Accomac and Northampton first and second rank, respectively, as the richest farmland per acre in the United States.

High Tribute Paid Wilson At Staunton

War President's Widow Unveils Portrait at His Birthplace.

By the Associated Press.

Staunton, Va., May 28.—Standing on the porch of the home where her husband was born, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson today unveiled F. Graham Cootes' portrait of the war President while hundreds applauded in tribute to this city's most distinguished son.

Dr. John H. Finley, associate editor of the New York Times, accepted the portrait on behalf of the American people, referring to Wilson as a great teacher, scholar and political philosopher. Speaking from a background of personal acquaintance with Wilson and as one possessing a knowledge of his personality, Dr. Finely said he was fundamentally the teacher.

"He will be remembered as the author of words which framed the covenant of what I am daring to say is the enduring peace of the world," Dr. Finley continued. "It is not for me to praise here his political achievements. It is as a teacher, scholar and political philosopher that I think he would want to be remembered.

"First and Last a Teacher."

"Woodrow Wilson was first and last a teacher. His offices were incidental to his tasks. He taught the multitudes."

Citing the modest but eloquent gesture of Franklin in his last days in signing himself "Benjamin Franklin the Printer," Dr. Finley asked: "What better epitaph could there be for Wilson than Woodrow Wilson—Teacher"?

In opening his address, the New York editor voiced appreciation at being invited to speak at the birthplace of Wilson and described it as "the most moving honor that has ever come to me." The character and individual doctrines of Wilson were woven into the address by Dr. Finley, who asserted his pride at being asked to pay tribute to "my friend, my teacher and my associate."

Quotes Wilson Epigrams.

"He could jest and beguile you, and make you wise beyond your expectancy," the speaker declared. "His charm was enhanced by the rugged lines of a homely face."

Dr. Finley quoted Wilson as saying on one occasion that "a mind is a great comfort to every man who has one."

"It can be truthfully said he was in the world and the mightiest man of his day, but he was not of it," the editor added.

The unveiling ceremony was followed immediately by a luncheon at Fairway Tavern in honor of Mr. Cootes and a large number of guests.

It was announced at the close of the exercises that Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, of Washington, present head of the Red Cross, personal friend of Wilson and White House physician during his Administration, had accepted the chairmanship of the national movement to make the Wilson birthplace here a memorial.

With Mrs. Wilson were Mrs. Cordell Hul, wife of the Secretary of State; Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, and Mrs. Cootes, wife of the artist.

Others present included Gen. John A. Lejeune, superintendent of Virginia Military Institute; Dr. Francis P. Gaines, president of Washington and Lee University; Dr. George Ferguson, academic dean of the University of Virginia, and Mrs. Ferguson, and Dr. Charles G. Maphis, of the university summer school, and Mrs. Maphis.

Regents' Board To Determine Pearson's Fate

Dispute Over Maryland University Head to Be Settled.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, May 28.—A decision in regard to conditions at the University of Maryland is to be made by the University board of regents within the next two weeks, it is said. The board has decided that it will not adjourn for the summer recess until definite action is taken.

The chief matter in dispute, it is said, is whether Dr. Raymond A. Pearson, president of the university, has cooperated with department heads and mmebers of the faculty. When the board of regents makes its decision it will, according to reports, take a definite stand on retention of Dr. Parson as president.

It was the board of regents, according to persons familiar with the situation, that sent a questionnaire to members of the faculty, and others, in regard to the situation.

When the attention of Dr. Pearson was called to the questionnaires today he said:

FERA Allots $900,000 Aid To Maryland

June Fund $189,000 Less Than Asked by Free State.

No Hardship Expected as Levy on Sales Augments Sum.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 28.—The Federal allotment for relief needs during June is $900,000, or $189,000 less than was requested, State Relief Administrator Harry Greenstein was informed today by Washington officials.

Greenstein said he had asked for $1,089,000 for June, but added he felt it probably would be possible to administer relief on that sum without great hardship to persons on relief. The $900,000, the same amount allotted for May, is supplemented by revenue from the new 1 per cent gross receipts tax, which is now the subject of a court fight.

During April the tax produced $328,758.83 and the 1 per cent automobile titling tax, a companion levy, returned an additional $31,850.43. The automobile tax yielded $35,396.28 from May 1 to May 25.

The work of sending out tax return forms for the May payments, due by June 10, will be started tomorrow from the office of Comptroller William S. Gordy, jr. Investigators are now checking up on about 8,000 retailers who did not file their April payment.

Richmond, Va., May 28.—Hustings Court Judge John L. Ingram today ordered a mental examination of Frank P. Cassidy, alias Thomas J. Gannon, former music teacher who is charged with several robberies in Richmond and nearby.

Gannon, as he is known to local police, was arrested here Easter morning on a charge of attempting to break into a drug store. He was indicted by a Husting, grand jury and his trial set for today. Judge Ingram continued the trial until next month and appointed a sanity commission.

The commission was named after Mrs. Myrtle Cassidy the defendant's wife, had told the court he had been confined in hospitals for the criminally insane at Raleigh, N. C., and in Canada, where he was sentenced for burglary.

Medical Seniors Hear Gov. Peery

Virginia College Class Told to Work Hard.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 28.—Gov. George C. Peery admonished graduates of the Medical College of Virginia tonight that the road to success required hard work and a spirit of devoted and unselfish service.

Praising the support given by physicians to preventive medicine and public health work in Virginia, the Governor said much remained to be done, and that an acute problem had arisen through concentration in urban areas of curative medical practice.

The Governor, delivering the commencement address, traced the history of public health work in Virginia. He praised Dr. Walter Reed, conqueror of yellow fever, and declared that Dr. Ennion G. Williams, the State's first health officer, did as much for the people of Virginia as any one man.

Pamunkeys to Go on Warpath In Richmond Colonial Pageant

By the Associated Press.

White House, Va., May 28.—Pamunkey Indian tomahawks will be flourished Saturday when 25 braves from the reservation near here take the warpath in the third scene of a pageant commemorating the first meeting of English adventurers and redskins of Powhatan's tribe in 1607.

The pageant, which is being sponsored by the State board of education in an effort to preserve the few native customs retained by present members of the tribe, is to be produced by the Richmond Community Recreation Association and the Powhatan Hills Memorial Association. It will be presented in the open at the reservation.

In costumes of 300 years ago, the Pamunkeys, aided by 25 amateur actors from Richmond who will impersonate English colonists, will reenact the meeting of their tribesmen with the men of Capt. John Smith and subsequent events in the relationships between the whites and Indians.

The pageant, written by Jack Scherer and directed by Miss Sally Brown, both of Richmond, will be presented three times Saturday—at 11 a. m., 2 p. m. and 4 p. m.

Film Star Derives Greatest Thrill From Her First Visit to National Capital

Elissa Landi a Visitor Who Is Keen Observer

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"I think, beyond question, this unexpected and utterly delightful visit to the Capital City of the United States is the most thrilling experience of my life."

Such was the enthusiastic statement with which Elissa Landi, screen star, novelist, musician and socialite, greeted her callers from the drama desks in her suite in the Shoreham yesterday afternoon.

"Washington," she continued, "is just now one of the two most exciting capitals in the world. The other is Leningrad. With the United States the dominant country in the world today, it probably provokes more angry moments abroad than any other nation. The conflict between Washington and Leningrad is inevitable since they represent opposite theories of government—the one capitalistic, the other communistic.

"Just to be in Washington is an inspiration to any sensitive intelligence. Never having been here before, and being here now without long preliminary planning is the biggest thrill I have ever had."

Is Intellectually Alert.

There is an intellectual alertness, a cosmopolitanism and a savoir faire about Miss Landi that project themselves unobtrusively into the consciousness of all who meet her within the first minute of conversation with this charming young woman whose talents cover so broad and versatile a field of successful effort.

Asked if her visit to Washington might have anything to do with gathering material for a novel, she replied that one was always gathering material, no matter what the activity of the moment.

"But there will be a beneficial result from this visit I feel sure, because in my next novel there is a character who is a politician. Without a first-hand knowledge of the things of which one writes, the writing becomes merely a succession of sentences. Now that I have been here and seen the Capital, the halls of Congress, and have gotten the 'feel' of the heart of the political life of the country, my book should possess a quality of realism that it would not otherwise have had."

Miss Landi's visit to the Capital is purely in the nature of a lark. She is not officially on vacation, but has merely slipped away from Hollywood for a short 11 days, primarily for the purpose of making a broadcast from New York last Sunday. From New York she flew down to Washington, arriving here yesterday morning. She will remain here until Wednesday evening, when she will board a plane for Hollywood, where she is under contract to Paramount.

Camera Is Deceptive.

Miss Landi, in person, is not precisely the Elissa Landi one is accustomed to see on the screen. She is taller than the average height of feminine screen players, standing 5 feet 6¼ inches without heels, and is more slender than the camera causes her to appear on the screen. In other words, the camera, playing one of the odd pranks it does now and again, multiplies Miss Landi's poundage but not her height, thus giving the impression, in the shadow image, of a shorter and slightly plumper young woman than actually meets the eye in the flesh.

One gathers that her immediate anxiety is to become an American citizen. Peculiar complications have impeded this ambition ever since the time Miss Landi first entered this country.

She is by parentage Austrian, but was born in Italy. She married an Englishman and lived for some years in England, which, under the law, made her a British subject. When she sought a quota number for passport purposes and entry into the United States, two years were required to thresh the matter out as to what her nationality really was.

She declared she was an Austrian. Austria said she was an Italian, because, regardless of the nationality of her parents, she had been born in Italy and never had lived in Austria. Pleading that she was British by marriage, the authorities cast that aside with the statement that one could marry anybody and that it was the birthplace that really mattered. So Miss Landi came to America as an Italian.

Citizenship a Problem.

When the question of American citizenship came up, she was informed that she could not become an American citizen as long as she was the wife of a British subject. Since that time, however, Miss Landi has been granted a divorce and upon her return to Hollywood will take immediate steps to secure her first naturalization papers.

When asked by one of her interrogators—there were three or four of us peppering her with questions, to which, incidentally, she knew all the answers—where her home was (the thought being that she still retained a European residence somewhere or other) the answer came quick as a flash, "Hollywood, California, United States of America."

"The United States is the only country in the world today in which one may live with any freedom or any fullness," she said. "My home, 850 feet above sea level on a hill a little inland from Santa Monica, isn't the most conducive spot in the world to concentrate on writing, because it is in plain view of the sea and so much goes on that one is continually distracted from concentrated effort.

"After all, when one has exercised the horse for a while, played a few sets of tennis, because it is a pleasant and a healthful thing to do, played some ping-pong because it is fun, and maybe taken a plunge in the pool or, better yet, the ocean, there really isn't very much time left for writing. And that, of course, all has to be between pictures."

Faces Busy Schedule.

Today Miss Landi is being tendered a reception at the Shoreham and a busy social and sightseeing schedule confronts her during the remainder of her brief visit here.

When it was suggested that it would be a novelty if she could slip down to Annapolis where three units are making motion pictures, Miss Landi seemed to think we were kidding.

It is just barely possible that we were. Miss Landi is one of those delightfully natural and companionable young women who do not permit a keenly developed intellectuality to dull their sense of humor to the point where they can not take a joke.

Miss Landi, as you now have gathered, is an exceedingly swell person. If you haven't gathered, then I have used the wrong words.

When Sybil Baker was in charge of dramatic productions at Central High School, one of the last plays she presented was "Trelawney of the Wells." In the cast were two lads who have gone on to fame and modest fortune on the stage and radio. They are Bob Lawrence, singing with Paul Whiteman's band at the Earle this week, and Vinton Hayworth, the Jack Arnold of the Myrt and Marge broadcasts, appearing currently on the stage of Loew's Fox. In honor of these two Central graduates, Miss Baker gave a supper party at the Mayfair last night at 11. This, as a matter of fact, might almost be denominated "old home week" in the local theaters. Sammy Lewis and Patti Moore, also on the Fox stage bill, are Washingtonians, Sammy being the brother of Goldie Ahearn, well-known outfitter of the smartly turned out men-about-town and matchmaker for Uncle Joe Turner in the box-fighting business. Four localites who have gone to the top all in town in one week is close to a record.

Memorial Day Premieres.

With the Earle already committed to a Thursday opening for its new bill, headed by "In Caliente" as the major screen feature, RKO-Keith's now falls in line and declares a Memorial Day inaugural for "Break of Hearts," the new RKO-Radio production, starring Katharine Hepburn, with Charles Boyer opposite.

Miss Hepburn in this subject steps out of period pictures and definitely typed characterizations to assume the principal role in a strictly modern romance. This new production presents its star as a girl of today who wears the most fashionable gowns and comports herself after the manner of an up-and-coming young woman as up-to-date as tomorrow morning's paper.

"Break of Hearts" is an original screen story by Lester Cohen, novelist and film writer. It concerns a struggling young composer and an eminent symphony orchestra conductor and their efforts to cling to a love that is subjected to the severest of tests.

Not since "A Bill of Divorcement" and "Christopher Strong" has Miss Hepburn appeared in a strictly modern role, and even in those early pictures in her career the romantic element was not stressed as it is in "Break of Hearts," according to all report.

How do you mean Decoration Day holiday?

The National Civic Theater Society, the formation of which was first made known in this column last Friday, according to present plans, will inaugurate its season in the Odeon Theater, National Park Seminary, Forest Glen, Md., on Tuesday, June 11, under the co-directorship of Myrtis Morgan, formerly managing directress of the Belasco Theater Art Society, and Lee K. Holland, a veteran Washington showman, with long experience in the theater to his credit. The plays will be directed by Forney Reese, with Theodore Tiller 2d as stage manager and member of the acting ensemble. Other important members of the cast will be Helen Shields and Robert Pitkin, equally at home on the dramatic and musical stages. It was Mr. Pitkin who played Ko-Ko to Mme. Schumann-Heink's Katisha in the Shubert's revival of "The Mikado," at the Belasco a few seasons back. He also was a member of Miss Morgan's Belasco Art Society Company in the same theater last season. The opening play has not been definitely decided upon, although negotiations have about been completed insuring the Civic Theater a play that has been in contemplation by other interests.

Refrigeration.

Patrons of a number of the Warner Bros. theaters in Washington have expressed curiosity as to the purpose of the scaffolding that has adorned several of the houses of late and have wondered why workmen put in an appearance in large numbers directly the last show is over. Particularly is this true with regard to the Ambassador and the Tivoli.

There is no need to keep the matter secret. The Warner houses are being equipped with new air-conditioning plants and the installation of new ventilating systems. In addition to the Ambassador and Tivoli, this provision for customer comfort during the heated term embraces the Avalon, York, Colony and Apollo.

Details of the extent of the improvements and probable date of their completion will be announced next week, according to John J. Payette, general manager of the Warner interests in the Washington territory.

Torrid Temperature Note.

They are previewing "In Caliente" for the drama desks in the projection room of the Earle Theater today at 2. "In Caliente," literally translated, means "in hot."

Which reminds me that they had to turn on the cooling system Sunday afternoon, for the first time this year, at the Palace, where Mae West is on the screen in "Goin' to Town."

Metropolitan

"G-MEN." First National picturization of a story by Gregory Rogers, with screen play by Seton I. Miller, starring James Cagney, with Robert Armstrong, Margaret Lindsay, and Ann Dvorak. Directed by William Keighley. Reviewed Monday afternoon (return engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

That driving, hard-fighting, straight shooting drama of Government agents, "G-Men," broke prematurely into its return engagement yesterday, to continue to thrill the public with the first tale of Department of Justice activities.

All action, "G-Men" affords its cast the opportunity to go places and do things in a big, blasting way—and they do, both the Federal men and the gangsters, with the latter biting the dust as quickly as did the Injuns of the horse opera of a day gone by.

James Cagney, Robert Armstrong, Margaret Lindsay, Ann Dvorak, Burton McLane and Edward Pawley all contribute grand jobs, the first three on the right side of the fence, the latter trio not so fortunately placed.

Heading the new supporting subjects is "The Singing Silhouette," wherein Olga Baclanova stages a comeback in the title role, with Charles Lawrence and Herbert Warren leading the support. The Paramount and Universal newsreels complete a program of A No. 1 entertainment.

St. Paul Players

"THE WHOLE TOWN'S TALKING." The St. Paul's Players present the comedy in three acts by Anita Loos and John Emerson, directed by Arthur S. Harvey, jr., with scenery and stage setting by Mary Catherine Connell. At St. Paul's Auditorium May 27 and 28. Reviewed Monday evening by W. A. Whitney.

Lusty comedy lines, with ever-pyramiding situations of seemingly increasing complexity, but which are unraveled just before the fall of the final curtain with unwonted abruptness, marked the St. Paul Players' production last evening of Anita Loos and John Emerson's romantic comedy, "The Whole Town's Talking."

As half of the romance, fostered by father for his daughter, Leo Brady, completely stole the show with his admixture of feigned dumbness and ostensibly native naivete.

Arthur S. Harvey, jr., did a fine job of direction. Setting and stage investiture, arranged under the direction of Mary Catherine Connell, was pleasing.

Screen Star Is Capital Visitor

Elissa Landi, one of the most versatile artistes appearing before the Hollywood cameras, arrived in Washington yesterday morning for a brief visit—her first to the National Capital—which will end tomorrow evening, when she will board a plane for the return trip to Hollywood where she is under contract to Paramount. Miss Landi is an actress, novelist, musician and socialite, in whose veins runs noble Austrian blood.

The Oriental cunning of Mother Goddam in wreaking a hideous revenge upon the man who had betrayed her 20 years before and had had her sold at auction to the junkmen along Shanghai's waterfront was revealed again on the stage of the National Theater last night by the distinguished actress who created the part and has played it more than 1,000 times.

The name of Florence Reed is inseparably linked with the title of John Colton's sensational four-act play, and rightfully so. Her portrayal of the aging proprietress of a far-famed house at 17 San Kaiou road, in Shanghai, is a flawless piece of characterization, marked by a quick shifting of lights and shadows, a judicious change of tempo with each variant mood and a final tragic confession of defeat when her schemes go all awry and she is hopelessly hoist by her own petard, a grief-stricken, pitiable and crushed mother, clinging to the body of the daughter she has slain.

Not a Pretty Story.

"The Shanghai Gesture" is not a pretty or delicate bit of dramaturgy. It is morbid, sensual, sensational and gruesome—strong meat for any theater and especially so for one housing a resident repertoire company. The story is one of seduction, interracial intrigues, brutal vengeance and the implied activities of one of the most notorious resorts in the East, where opium smoking is among the least of the practiced vices.

In this setting is evolved a story that grips the interest like no play the National Theater Players heretofore have essayed. There is no need at this late day to detail the series of crafty steps in a long process of retribution whereby Mother Goddam planned to humble and disgrace the man whom she, a Manchu princess, had made great only to be sold into virtual slavery and probable death when he decided he wished to marry an English girl of his own rank and station. It is a sordid tale, but one that has sufficiently captured public imagination to have survived the years.

As already intimated, Florence Reed gives a magnificent performance in the role of Mother Goddam, realizing every shade of meaning, every nuance of a role that is drawn in broad strokes of heavy scarlet. It is vastly to the credit of the National Players, considerably augmented for this occasion, that they are able to accord their guest star such competent support as she was afforded last night.

Probably the best work of the evening, next to the star's, was contributed by Ruth Lee, in the role of Poppy, a part calling for vigorous and vital treatment which is precisely what Miss Lee gave it. Miss Reed generously and justly divided many final curtain calls with Miss Lee at the end of the play.

Welcomed back to the stage where he reigned as leading man for two years, Walter Gilbert returned to the National last night to assume the role of Charteris, opposite the guest star of the week. He was heartily greeted and turned in a handsome performance. Roy Roberts also acquitted himself well, as he always does, as Caesar Hawkins, Mother Goddam's dope-ridden, nerve-shattered man of all work, and Warren Parker surprised everyone by doing an uncommonly convincing job in the role of Lin Chi, elderly chief clerk in the questionable establishment of Mother Goddam.

Support and Settings.

Raymond Bramley contrived a remarkably realistic makeup for the role of Prince Oshima, a pivotal figures in the sinister ramifications of a lurid plot. Edwina Wise is prominently cast, but without a line to speak, as the English daughter of Charteris, whom Mother Goddam auctions to the junkmen at a smart dinner to the bigwigs of Shanghai in her ornate private apartment within the less formal precincts of her rambling brothel, just as she once was auctioned by the girl's father.

The four settings devised by Charles Squires for "The Gallery of the Laughing Dolls," "The Grand Red Hall of Lily and Lotus Roots," "The Little Room of the Great Cat" and "The Green Stairway of the Angry Dragon" are colorful and atmospheric in the extreme and, combined with the letter-perfect performance of the play by every member of the large cast, gave "The Shanghai Gesture" quite the flavor of a midseason Broadway production.

Whether one fancies the "red-meat" quality of the play or not, its power can not be gainsaid. It was sufficiently well thought of by last night's practically capacity house to be paid the compliment of ten enthusiastic curtain calls upon the conclusion of the last act—a high tribute, indeed!

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Keystone Cops And Ex-Mayor.

Hollywood, May 28.

WITH me it was more out of curiosity than sentimentality. I can't speak for the mob who gathered on the set at Warner's to watch Ben Turpin, Chester Conklin, Ford Sterling and the group of Mack Sennett policemen reunite and go through their former antics for a modern talking short, "Keystone Hotel." I wanted to see how these former favorites, disciples of another day's style of comedy, worked and behaved.

I say I can't speak for the rest, for many present had that "Auld Lang Syne" look in their eyes. Warners are depending on curiosity and sentimentality to make this short a big attraction. "Keystone Hotel" can't fail. In fact, Ben Turpin said to me: "If everyone who came on this set to watch us work paid a buck apiece, they could make money without releasing the picture." Turpin went on to explain that he and his co-stars didn't seek the job. "They came after us," said Turpin.

* * * *

Turpin, now 61 years old, looks practically the same as I remember him in his hey-hey day on the screen. He did a couple of Pratt falls to prove he was as good as ever. Ford Sterling, now 50 years old, has put on weight and is not as spry jumping on and off the police patrol wagon. Chester Conklin, age 47, appears to have aged more than the others, for his hair has thinned out considerably, and what there is of it is absolutely gray. Turpin is probably the best fixed, financially, of the trio. He is proud of the fact that he has his cross-eye insured for $25,000 with Lloyds of London. "I've always got my eye on money," he exclaimed, and let go with a boisterough laugh. "That's a good one, isn't it?" He seemed very pleased with himself.

* * * *

THESE three were the stars, again getting the billing and the publicity. Sitting in the patrol wagon were a number of the original Keystone cops. The picture hadn't changed so much for them. They were still playing the small roles, and had been doing that for years in flickers. It was good to be back with the old troupers, but it was better yet because it meant work. Mack Sennett would take one week with the usual Keystone cops' comedy. This one would be three weeks in the making.

They now get ready to play a scene for which they were famous, and which delighted audiences in the nickelodeons. A wagon filled with pies is rolled onto the set. The artists can hardly wait to go to work.

They are nice, big, luscious pies. No one thinks of tasting one. They are to be tossed and received full in the face. Pies are strictly for laughs.

The big comedy scene gets going. Turpin throws out the first pie. The game is on. Pies go sailing through the air. When one lands square on Ford Sterling's kisser, the audience howls. In this comedy art it is better to be a good catcher than a good pitcher. Anyone can hurl a pie. The trick is to catch it right in the middle of the face, and let the soft filling flow across your face. Turpin is rated one of the best catchers in the business. No matter how you hurl a pie, Turpin manages to get directly in its path. For a close-up, Director Ralph Staub and Writer Joe Traub join the cast and they hurl pies at one target, Turpin.

Ben stands there catching. He opens the collar of his uniform to let the pie run down his neck. "I haven't felt this good in years," Turpin shouts to the crowd, who are laughing, and in that crowd I believe I hear the laughter of an uninvited guest—Mickey Mouse.

* * * *

AMONG those working in this "Keystone Hotel" are two former female stars. One is a former Mack Sennett bathing beauty, Marie Prevost, and the other is Juanita Hansen, who was a prominent leading lady. Miss Prevost's face is still easy to gaze on, but the seams which gave her form no longer hold the flesh in place. It now bubbles over. Miss Hansen has put on weight. She meets an actor she knew back when they both had star dressing rooms. He is frankly puzzled and doesn't recognize her. She is carrying her scrapbook and turns the pages. He now recalls.

But Director Staub is now ready to take another scene. This sequence is on the standing set of a New York street, situated on the back lot. There is a police station on one side of the street, and directly opposite is the permanent theater lobby, which is used in all Warner pictures when you see the exterior of a theater.

* * * *

In the lobby of this prop theater there is a large picture frame standing to lend atmosphere. One of the pictures in this frame is a group photograph; it is that of a celebrity, taken while he was on a sightseeing tour of the studio. The celebrity, standing in the center of the group, is ex-Mayor James J. Walker. It was probably taken while he was here to plead for Tom Mooney. Then he, too, was a star. Now his photograph is used in a theater lobby frame as a prop.

I came to see the Keystone cops out of curiosity, and all I really saw was a faded photo of an ex-mayor. I must be sentimental, after all.

"Rainbow Review"

"THE RAINBOW REVUE." The Mandolin Smithson Hodgson School of Dance and Expression presents its annual spring recital, in a prologue, two acts and eight scenes. Staged under the direction of Lille S. Hipsley, Clifton K. Hodgson, and Elmer Hipsley. Orchestra under the direction of Myer Goldman, with Marguerite Stevens, at the piano. At the National Theater. Reviewed Sunday evening by W. A. Whitney.

Celebrating its silver anniversary, the Mandolin Smithson Hodgson School of Dance and Expression presented "The Rainbow Revue" Sunday evening in the National Theater before an audience of more than 1,200 enthusiastic fathers, mothers and friends.

In the two acts and eight scenes every phase of the terpsichorean art was exhibited by the 70-odd boys and girls who participated. Toe and tap routines predominated, with acrobatic and eccentric numbers by no means strangers to the program.

While the older students performed with the greater precision, it was the younger—and youngest—members of the company who "stole" the show.

At the close of the performance the following medals were awarded, the presentation being by William Hannan:

For attendance records, 1 year—Regina Thomas, Lillian Lee Benjamin, Jane Johnston, Helene Weinstein, Patty Lou Healey, Mary Jane Hammett, Harriet Hawthorn, Betty Larcomb, Geneva Friedman, Vivian Scott; for 2 years, Jean Taylor, Elaine Taylor; for 3 years, Louise Burgess, Audrey Ferguson; for 7 years, Rita Zuck; for 8 years, Roma Lee Haun; for 9 years, Zelda Weightman.

Postlude

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Piano recital by Edward Dawson in Barker Hall. Program: Sonata in B flat minor (Chopin), Chorale-Prelude, "Now Comes the Gentiles' Savior" (Bach-Busoni), "Petite Suite: Prelude Joyeuse, Lament, Madrigal" (Dawson), Ballade in D minor (Brahms), Sonatine (Ravel), six Etudes (Chopin).

On the evidence of his playing last evening, Edward Dawson seems to possess a good admixture of the four qualities essential to convincing pianism: technique, poesy, intelligence and spirituality. Some pianists have established reputations upon technique alone, because brilliant execution, like fireworks, can momentarily dazzle the beholder. But the impression left by such playing is as evanescent as the scintillance of a colored explosion against the blackness of space. Neither the emotions nor the thoughts of the auditor have been touched, and without that contact music has no meaning.

Under Mr. Dawson's serviceable technique lies an interpretative intention that quickens his playing, and that vitality in turn awakens one's interest. He is never indictable for the esthetic crime of banality which casts the listener into an apathetic stupor. One does not need to agree with all the minutiae of his readings to find them worthy of attention, for they are indices of his temperament and his artistic tendencies.

One surmises from his treatment of Chopin an affinity for that composer's peculiar poetic sense, with the exception of the mordidezza that tinges so much of Chopin's lyricism. Subtlety was missing from his reading of the B flat minor sonata, and the E flat minor etude was somewhat blurred for want of finesse in the phrasing.

In Busoni's transcription of the Bach chorale was evident a sure apperception of the spritual values, for Mr. Dawson used therein a touch and a tonal quality quite different from those applied elsewhere. The Brahms ballade had the requisite sturdiness and the Ravel sonatine its due measure of wit, although the irony was not always delicately pointed. Of Mr. Dawson's own suite, the first movement is by far the best, setting an imaginative pace which makes the "Lament" and "Madrigal" seem laggards.

Buck Newsom, Knee Cap Fractured, Lost to Nats for Month

$50,000 Ace Removed to Hospital

Finishes Game Despite Injury by Averill's Line Drive in 3d.

By Shirley L. Povich.

THE LINE DRIVE that Earl Averill drilled back into the pitcher's box at Griffith Stadium yesterday fractured the left knee-cap of Buck Newsom, Washington's $50,000 pitching investment, and he will be kept out of action for at least a month.

zUnaware of the extent of the injury until x-ray pictures at Georgetown Hospital revealed the fracture, Manager Bucky Harris last night bemoaned the accident that deprives the Nats of their outstanding pitcher at a time when it seemed the club would make its most serious bid for the pennant.

Newsom, in great pain, finished the last sixth and one-third innings of the ball game, after Trainer Mike Martin applied ice packs to his knee between innings, but immediately following the finish he was rushed to the hospital for an examination.

While Washington club officials were sanguine that the injury would not deyrive them of Newsom's services for more than two or three weeks, the club physician declared that it was unlikely that the big pitcher would be able to return to action "for at least a month."

Careed Was Threatened.

Had Averill's terrific line drive struck Nesom an inch higher on the knee, his pitching career might have been terminated then and there, declared the club physician. Newsom was struck on the lower pole of the knee cap, which he declared was a "favorable position."

Marveling at the stoicism of the big pitched which permitted him to finish the game despite the seriousness of his injury, the club physician reported that Newsom would be returned to the hospital today. He was removed to his hotel room last night following the examination.

When hte swelling subsides, his left leg will be placed in a cast and he will be confined to the hospital for at least two weeks. After that, crutches will be prescribed.

Irked More by Defeat.

Irked more by his defeat than by his injury, the voluble Newsom oblivious to his pain in the Nats' locker room after the game. "You can say for me," he said, "that the only way those Indians could beat me was to cripple me first. At that, I made it tough for 'em. I'd a-pitched 18 innings if I'd a-had to."

The shot that Averill's bat fired back into the pitcher's box in the third inning caromed off Newsom's knee with such force that it rolled far across the foul line toward the Nats' dugout. The big pitcher gave chase immediately, until he saw there was no chance to make the play.

In apparent pain, he started to rub his knee and time was called by the umpires. At that, Newsom waved the players back to their positions. He was all right he said. Averill, on first base, laughed at his discomfiture and the other Indians on the bench were in high glee at what they thought were his clowning tactics.

Reassures Mates.

Assuring his mates that he was not hurt, Newsom returned to the mound. He pitched a single to Trosky but then he whizzed a vicious third strike past Odell Hale and apparently proved himself.

The next two innings he turned back the Indians without a hit. In the seventh, he engaged in a bit of belligerent banter with Joe Vosmik whom he tagged out not too gently on the first base line. Both players assumed fighting poses, and umpire Dinneen led Newsom from the scene.

Newsom laughed as he returned to the bench.

Eke Out 6-5 Victory on 3 Circuit Smashes; Ted Lyons Bows.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, May 29.—A barrage of home runs, including Bob Johnson's eleventh of the season, gave the Philadelphia Athletics a 6-to-5 decision over the Chicago White Sox today. The Sox held their league lead, however, as the Yankees also lost.

Johnny Marcum, who held the league leaders to eight hits in his first appearance on the mound in two weeks, cracked out the first homer in the second. Pinky Higgins followed with the second in the third, driving in three runs and then Johnson came through in the seventh with what proved to be the deciding counter. The Sox rallied in the ninth and scored one run but Marcum kept the tying and winning runs on base.

Ted Lyons, Chicago veteran, was the losing hurler, dropping his second decision of the year. He was taken out in the seventh after loading the bases on a single and a pair of walks following Johnson's homer and Wyatt finished the game.

Giants Play No Night Baseball, Says Terry

St. Louis, May 28 (AP).—There'll be no baseball under the lamps for the New York Giants while Bill Terry is the boss.

"So long as I have my way the Giants will never play night baseball," the Gotham manager said today. "You can't tell me, but that it is injurious to players. The air is damp and chilly, muscles won't loosen as they should and chances of getting hurt are greater."

Grove Blasted As Browns Win, 6-5

Red Sox Ace Is Nicked for 13 Hits; Ferrell Also Is Pounded.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, May 28.—The last-place St. Louis Browns whaled "Lefty" Grove and Wes Ferrell for 13 hits that totaled 25 bases today, while defeating the Red Sox, 6-5, for the rubber game in the series.

Eleven of the St. Louis safeties were made off Grove, who was battered out of the box in the eighth, when the visitors put on a three-run rally and pulled into a 5-4 lead. Triples by Ed Coleman and Rollie Hemsley, plus Al Bejma's homer over the left-field wall, his second in as many days, with a mate on base, were the blows that sent Grove to the showers.

Ferrell Follows Welch.

Johnny Welch relieved Grove, but made way for Wes Ferrell in the ninth, when Sammy West's double and "Moose" Solters' single provided the winning run. Solters, traded yesterday for Ossie Melillo, who played second base for the Sox, whacked out two singles and a two-bagger against his former teammates.

Indians Beat Pain-Ridden Newsom

Harder Goes Route Aided by Teammates' Brilliant Play.

By Shirley L. Povich.

THEY beat Buck Newsom yesterday, did the Cleveland Indians, by the score of 5 to 4, but be yet not harsh with Newsom, for it was a one-legged pitcher who was out there on the mound for the Nats striving valiantly to stem the surge of the enemy in those late innings.

Unbeknown to the 7,000 in the stands, hungry for more of the diet of laughs which the clowning pitcher unfailingly serves, Newsom was laboring as a cripple in the pain of a left knee-cap fractured by a terrific line drive off the bat of Earl Averill back in the third inning.

Seemingly oblivious to the pain, the big fellow stuck it out. The entire nine innings he pitched after apparently shaking off the effects of his injury. But the hop on his fast one was gone by the eighth inning. Then it was that the Indians hammered his pitches for four straight hits that lifted them out of a 3-to-2 deficit into a 5-to-3 lead.

Treated on Bench.

He was out there pitching between applications of ice packs by Trainer Mike Martin on the bench at the end of each inning, yet for four and one-third innings after Averill's wallop caromed off his knee with such force that it rolled far across the foul line, Newsom permitted only three hits and a single run. Then, he weakened.

A walk to his malefactor, Earl Averill, paved the way for Newsom's downfall in that eighth. He found the strength to strike out Hal Trosky, but Odell Hale reached him for a single to center. Bruce Campbell drilled a single to right to score Averill and then it was that Frank Pytlak broke up the ball game with a long double to left center that gave the Indians their second and third runs of the inning.

Against Mel Harder, who had yielded them three runs in the second inning, the Nats were blanked for five straight frames before they came up with a run in the eighth when Johnny Stone led off with a triple. Bozie Berger's sensational stop of Cecil Travis' bid for a hit over second base, and Hale's barehanded pickup and brilliant throw of Powell's perfect bunt, averted further trouble for Harder.

Mates Rescue Harder.

Again in the ninth, brilliant fielding rescued Harder. Joe Kuhel had revived the Nats' hopes with one out when he singled into left field but Hal Trosky galloped against the right field boxes for a fancy catch of Ossie Bluege's foul pop and the Nats' fate was sealed.

Back in the sixth inning, the Nats lost a golden opportunity to boost their 3-2 lead after Myer and Stone singled with none out. Travis' bunt advanced 'em to third and second, respectively, but when Jake Powell started for first base on what apparently was a fourth ball, Umpire Donnelly called him back to the plate. According to the Nats on the bench, Donnelly reversed his decision after calling the pitch a ball. They were irate. Eventually Powell popped up. Bolton was intentionally walked and Newsom grounded to Knickerbocker to end the threat.

Averill Triples in First.

Earl Averill's triple had given the Tribe its 1-0 lead in the first inning, but the Nats wiped that out with a three-run uprising against Harder in the second. With one out, Stone and Travis singled and Bolton scored 'em both with a long double to left. Bolton scored Powell with a vicious single to center.

Tigers Pound Gomez and Win, 8-3

Two Home Runs Each by Greenberg, Rogell Aid in Drive.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 28.—Paced by Hank Greenberg and Bill Rogell, each of whom connected with two home runs, the Detroit Tigers pounded out an 8 to 3 decision over the New York Yankees today for their first victory of the three-game series.

Greenberg and Rogell accounted for all of the Tigers' tallies, driving in four runs each. In addition to his tenth and eleventh circuit blows, which put him in a tie for the American League lead with Bob Johnson of the Athletics, the champions' big first-sacker drove out a double and a single in five times at bat.

While the Tigers were beating Gomez for the second time this season and handing the Yankee ace his sixth setback of the year, Alvin Crowder, the grizzled right-handed veteran, let the New Yorkers down with four hits, including Bill Dickey's sixth homer of the year in the seventh. The other two runs crossed the plate in the fourth on two singles, an error and an outfield fly.

Greenberg Clouts Two.

Greenberg's first homer came with none on in the fourth to get the Tigers away in front. His double was hit in the fifth with one on, and Rogell followed with his first homer with two mates on the sacks for a four-run rally.

The Detroit first-baseman's second homer was hit off Johnny Murphy in the ninth with Charley Gehringer perched on first. Previously Rogell had got his second circuit drive in the eighth with the bases empty. Gomez was taken out in the eighth for a pinch-hitter, and Murphy pitched the ninth frame.

Garner Gets 3 Wins Despite Suspension

By the Associated Press.

Latonia, Ky., May 28.—They set down "Uncle Mack" Garner for ten days for rough riding here yesterday and the prospect of an enforced vacation apparently peeved the little old man who rode Cavalcade in all of his notable victories last year.

Already booked for five mounts today and permitted under the rules of Kentucky to fulfill those engagements, he set about his tasks with something of an "I'll show 'em attitude." After finishing second on Earle Baker in the first dash, he drove home with Our Manager, Penmar and Bustanybody in successive rcaes.

His triumphs astride Our Manager and Penmar proved something of an oddity, inasmuch as they not only completed a double for "Uncle Mack," but a double for the J. C. Milam stables, as well as constituting the "daily double" in the mutuels.

'The Real McCoy' Says Louis Can Whip the Giant Carnera

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, May 28.—Joe Louis, in the opinion of the real McCoy, will beat Primo Carnera when they meet in New York June 28.

The real McCoy is Norman Selby, now 63, and busy supervising farm lots the Ford Motor Co. provides for its employes. But back in the nineties and early part of this century he was the Kid McCoy, recognized in most States as world's middleweight champion and one of the greatest fighters, combining punching power and boxing skill, ever to enter a ring.

"I think young Louis will beat Carnera because Carnera is a musclebound type of fighter," said McCoy. "But I don't think Louis is quite ready to meet Max Baer for the title. He needs more experinece."

But McCoy does believe the Detroit Negro is a "comer" and has plenty of possibilities. McCoy pays tribute to the "dynamite" Louis carries in both hands and gives the 21-year-old youngster credit for being able to use his left hand—something that made McCoy feared in his day.

McCoy likes to talk about the fight game, even though he gringly admits he hasn't had any "real exercise in 15 years." He said:

That the hardest battle of his career was with Joe Choynski, who broke his nose and knocked him down 16 times before falling a victim to the famed McCoy punch; that no man ever climbed into a ring with any greater fighting heart than Stanley Ketchel or George (Kid) Lavigne; that Gene Tunney, at his best, could have whipped Jack Dempsey at his best, because "a straight puncher will always beat a swinger when they are both good men;" that too much clinching is spoiling the game and that clinchers should be penalized until they stop clinching.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 28.—Time trials filled the starting field for the Indianapolis motor speedway's Memorial Day 500-mile race today with 33 of the speediest racers ever entered in the auto classic.

Sitting secure in the pole position is the youthful Rex Mays, of Los Angeles. His average of 120.736 miles per hour topped all others who successfully passed the qualification test—a 25-mile sprint at a gait of 100 miles an hour or better.

The 33 speedsters will line up at 10 a. m., Thursday in eleven rows, three abreast to start the gruelling grind. The field includes a score of veteran pilots and several tyros of the 500-mile event, among them Mays.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 28.—Sixteen crews, the smallest fleet in ten years, drew lanes today for the annual Poughkeepsie regatta on the Hudson June 18. Only five crews will compete in the freshman race, four in the junior varsity, and seven in the varsity pull of four miles.

The two far-Western crews, Washington and California, fared well in the draw, California getting the No. 1 lane, closest to the west shore and more sheltered in rough going, for the varsity race. Washington drew the same lane for the 3-mile junior varsity drive. Navy drew No. 1 in the 2-mile freshman sprint.

31,000 See Challenger Whip Foe

By Bill McCormick,
A Staff Correspondent.

Polo Grounds, New York, May 28. Jimmy McLarnin and Barney Ross again played 15 rounds of "bean porridge hot, bean porridge cold" with leather mittens before 31,000 here tonight. At the end of the game the official arbiters indulged in a pastime of their own known as "gyp the winner," or "let's change champions," by declaring Ross a unanimous winner—and once again welterweight champion of the world.

Messrs. Abe Goldberg and George La Cron were the judges participating in the post-fight buffoonery. Jack Dempsey, the old man mauler himslef, who refereed the contest, had a finger in the fun by adding his vote to those of the judges which deprived McLarnin of his title.

Ross did win the fight, but not decisively enough to take a title. The Post score sheet gave the new champion a margin of 1½ points. Opinion in the press box was fairly evenly divided on the winner, but the surprised huzzah which greeted the decision and the wholesome boo which accompanied Ross from the ring, left no doubt as to the opinion of the assembled multitude.

New Champion Daring.

The third—and rubber—fight between the venerable Irishman and the young Jewish lad, who was born on New York's East Side and reared in Chicago's Ghetto, was not as uninteresting as might be indicated by the bare statement that Ross and McLarnin had met again, gone 15 rounds to a decision and that there were no knockdowns.

Starting slowly, the boys occasionally rose to great heights, largely because of the daring of the new champion, who swapped swats with his heavier and usually harder punching opponent.

Starting as they did in their previous bouts, with Ross pecking away with his left and McLarnin holding his right cocked and stabbing with his portside flipper, the boys soon reversed roles. Before the fifth round, and as both contestants warmed up, Ross—the boxer—was doing the slugging and McLarnin—the puncher—was indulging in the fancy fisticuffing.

Barney wasted a golden opportunity in the first 10 rounds by not carrying the fight to McLarnin's midsection. At that point, Ross had a very slight lead, but strangely enough, the champion was the stronger.

Ross Switches Attack.

In the tenth, Ross switched to the body and then business really began to pick up. McLarnin, who had been unable to punch to the midsection while Barney was concentrating on an attack to the noggin, decided he might best meet the challenge by a similar campaign. So there they stood through many furious toe-to-toe exchanges, whaling away at each other's tummies. And it was some fun.

Pop Foster, McLarnin's veteran manager, started the fighting even before the opening gong by sounding a loud and prolonged squawk against Dempsey as a referee for the bout in which "his Shamus" was to defend his title.

"Dempsey has been in Ross' camp," Pop complained. "He's practically a member of the Ross camp, and never should be allowed to work this bout."

McLarnin Is Outpunched.

Ross had things pretty much his own way for three rounds, in which he stabbed away at McLarnin's noggin with a highly educated left and danced or bobbed away from danger. They were exchanging lefts in the fourth when McLarnin flicked claret from Ross' nose with a gentle poke from his southpaw maulie. The nose bled thereafter and Ross threw caution to the wind thereafter, standing toe to toe with

Owens May Avenge Old Snub In Racing Metcalf Next Week

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 28.—Jesse Owens is going after a bit of revenge next week.

The Ohio record-breaker will meet Ralph Metcalf, of Marquette, in a 100-yard feature attraction at Marquette a week from Friday, and behind that race there is a story.

Several years ago, when Jesse was a high school student, Metcalf was his idol. They met for the first time in Chicago, at the national interscholastic meet, and Jessie boyishly ran up to shake hands with the track star he almost worshipped.

The next day, after Jesse had broken several marks in the interscholastics, Metcalf sought him out and introduced him to several friends, but the hurt lingered.

Now Jesse is determined to make good the boast he made to his high school coach. The Marquette meet will be a night affair, which is not to Owens' liking, but Jesse says he'll do his best to "run that big lug off the track."

Central Blasts 16-5 Win Over Tech to Tie for Second in Race

Team Garners 22 Safeties In Game

8-Run Rally in Sixth Cinches Matters for Mt. Pleasant Men.

CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL went into a tie for second place in the interhigh baseball series yesterday by smothering Tech beneath a 16-5 defeat at Eastern Stadium. The victory easily established the Mount Pleasanters as the hardest-hitting team in the series as they pummelled three Tech pitchers for 22 hits including two home runs, two triples and three doubles.

The series will come to a close this afternoon with Eastern meeting Western in an empty anti-climax. Western, easily the weakest team in the series, is conceded practically no chance of upsetting the champions. Such a victory, however, would give Western a tie for second place.

The game will be played at 3:30 p. m. at Eastern's stadium. The change in date was made because of the Memorial Day vacation Friday.

Lefty Rowles held Tech without a hit or a run until the sixth inning when Walter Merchant singled and Cotton Crawford socked a home run into deep center field to score the first two for the Maroon.

Dunlap Leads Attack.

Don Dunlap, Central catcher, continued his .650 batting pace with four hits in five trips to the plate, including two doubles and a triple. Walter Smith, Central right fielder, also stayed hot on the heels of Dunlap by getting four out of six, including his second home run of the series, in the sixth inning with two on base. The other Central homer came in the eighth when Reed Taylor connected for a terrific drive to center field, also with two on.

Bill Liggett, Tech's starting pitcher, lasted until the sixth inning, retiring after Smith's home run. Specks Elgin, who relieved him, was unable to finish the inning as Central quickly found him for five hits. Young Sonny Cassenway finished the game but not before Central had increased its hit total by eight more.

Brunswick, Middletown and Church Hill in Battle for Lead.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

FREDERICK, Md., May 28.—The fight for first place in the Tri-County League narrowed down to Brunswick, Middletown and Church Hill as Middletown defeated Frederick, 9 to 3; Brunswick set back Damascus, 17 to 6; Church Hill took the measure of New Market, 12 to 4; Jefferson nosed out Wakefield, 11 to 10, and Point of Rocks won from Cedar Grove, 11 to 5. Old Dominion Horse Show Tomorrow

Fredericksburg Is Scene of Meet; District Horses Entered.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., May 28.—This section was "horse-conscious" tonight as fans from many sections of Virginia, Maryland and Washington rolled into the Fair Grounds for the two-day Fredericksburg Horse Show which opens tomorrow morning.

The third annual event, staged here under the auspices of the Fredericksburg Hunt Club, will see two already-crowned champions of Virginia shows in action as well as many other horses well known throughout sporting circles in the State for their ability in the tan bark arena.

Greystone Entered.

Among the outstanding hunters is Greystone, owned by Edwin Vaughan, of Fredericksburg. The beautiful 5-year-old scored at the Deep Run Hunt in Richmond last year and at Hampton. This year she is to compete for champion honors with Sir Greystone, property of L. R. Colbert, of Fredericksburg, which was crowned champion of the Hampton (Va.) show several weeks ago, and Silver Moon, victor in the Edge Hill show at Aylette, Va., earlier in the season. Silver Moon is owned by George Benoit, of this city.

The show this year consists of 32 classes, half of which are to be run tomorrow and the other half on the following day. The concluding event will be the awarding of the champion hunter prize.

Among the Washingtonians who are showing are Miss Margaret Cotter, W. Carleton Eacho and Mrs. William Jeffries Chewning. Mrs. Chewning, the former Margo Couzens, daughter of the Michigan Senator, has several horses entered. It is probable that her sister, Miss Betty Couzens, may ride one of Mrs. Chewning's entries.

Five Maryland Stars Among Ten Best Athletes of the Year

By Lewis F. Atchison.

At the risk of inciting the college boys to civil war on a minor scale, we give you our nominees for a hall of fame—if the town ever gets one—the ten outstanding District college athletes of the year.

Calling the lads back to the sport page for a final bow is the least we can do for them. It is meager remuneration for their fine work, for the thrills and entertainment they gave the fans. We suppose that they would better appreciate a stein of beer or two, but there are limitations to everything, including the sports department's budget.

With no effort to rank them in order, capability or drawing power, the ten are "Tuffy" Leemans, George Washington; Ed Hardagen and Joe Meglin, Georgetown; Bernie Lieb and Red Fleming, Catholic University; "South" Sothoron, Earl Widmyer, Bill Guckeyson, Charley Keller and Ivan Nedomatsky, all of Maryland.

Leemans, to refresh your memory, was quite a football player last autumn, and very likely will be All-American next season. Color fairly dripped from his burly shoulders, and he rates well up in the group.

Ed Hargaden, on a good night or on an "off-night," was the mainspring in Georgetown's basket ball works and the ranking courtman of the town. The Syracuse lad's dismal failure in his senior year failed to dim his star, and he will go down in the books as one of the greatest of all time to sport the Blue and Gray. Joe Meglin's generally improved work in football, particularly in punting, gave him the rank of the best full back in the vicinity, and he deserved it.

"Red" Fleming's spectacular if a bit crude fisticuffing with and for Catholic University's boxing team, helped keep the turnstiles in condition through the winter months. "Red" had color and a punch, and the boys in gallery A seemed to enjoy both. Bernie Lieb's efficient basket-balling gives him the call over a couple of other deserving youths. The Cardinals' lanky center was chiefly responsible for Hermie Schmarr's scoring mark, which his passing aided immeasurably.

The Maryland delegation was the answer to any coach's prayer. Sothoron in football, Widmyer on the track, Guckeyson in any sport where a man was needed, Keller in baseball and Nedomatsky in the ring knocking down everything but the ringposts. Every one a 14-karat, guaranteed athlete. The name of any one of them in his best sport was enough to assure a crush at the box office.

Year's Record Set by Stocks At Salem

By the Associated Press.

SALEM, N. H., May 28.—Just two-fifths of a second behind the track record of 1:37 2-5, Ascot Stable's Stocks, with Jockey G. Seabo up, flashed across the finish line at Rockingham Park today, winner by a nose over Don Guzman in the fastest mile of the year at this track.

The 4-year-old gelding bided his time, as Gentle Knight, Polydorus and Don Guzman set a sizzling pace along the dark brown trail.

At the last corner he jumped up with Don Guzman, raced with him neck and neck down the stretch and,

Mrs. Pray's Net Score of 157 Wins Star Cup Tournament

New Champ Gets Trophy By Stroke

Mrs. Scott Is 2d in Manor Title Play; Low Gross to Mrs. Meckley.

MRS. LUCILLE G. PRAY, host club champion, won the Star Cup tournament yesterday at Manor's course with a 36-hole net score of 157.

Mrs. Pray nosed out the opening-day pacesetter, Mrs. Jack Scott, of Congressional, by one shot to succeed Mrs. Landra B. Platt, of Chevy Chase, as champion.

The new title holder, two strokes back of Mrs. Scott at the end of 18 holes, added an 87 gross to her first day's 82. She has a 6 handicap.

Mrs. Scott, who reeled off a brilliant 80 Monday, faltered badly on the second round, taking a 90. She, too, has a 6 handicap.

Wins Low Gross.

Low gross honors were awarded Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Indian Spring, twice former District champion, Mrs. Meckley finished with 85-84—169. Mrs. Pray tied her for the medal, but the Manor star was ineligible to receive both prizes, and waived aside her medal chance in favor of the championship prize.

Miss Winifred Faunce, of Manor, District champion, with 82-88—170-10—160, and Mrs. Hume Peabody, of Army and Navy, 94-96—190-30—160, tied for second low net, but Mrs. Peabody won in the draw.

Post Card of 82.

While most of the first day's leaders saw their scores skyrocket yesterday, Mrs. Philip Cole, Army and Navy golfer, caused considerable talk when she posted a fine 82 gross. This score was in sharp contrast to her opening day round of 100. Mrs. Cole, with her 10 handicap, was two shots from the prize-winning circle. She had a beautiful 39 on the first nine, and came home in 43 for the lowest 18-hole medal score of the day.

Mrs. Roland Mackenzie, of Congressional, added an 87 to her 88, and finished with a net of 161. Miss Nellie Mae Neff, of Manor had a 162 net.

Pirates Down Phillies To Attain Series Edge

Pittsburgh, May 29 (AP).—With Big Jim Weaver pitching six-hit ball and fanning seven, the Pittsburgh Pirates moved a little closer to the first division today as they turned back the Phillies, 3 to 1, to win the series, two games to one. Although the victory left the Pirates still in fifth place it cut the advantage of the idle Cardinals to 7 percentage points.

Although they collected 11 hits off four Philadelphia hurlers, the Pirates were unable to score except in the fourth, when they bunched four blows for two runs, and in the seventh, when L. Waner led off with his second triple of the game and tallied on brother Paul's long fly.

Czech, Australian Advance in Tennis

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 28.—Roderich Menzel, the towering Czech, and Adrian Quist, young Australian Davis Cup player, smashed their way into the quarter-finals of men's singles in the French hard-court tennis championship today as rain halted the feature match in the women's division between Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Conn., and Anita Lizana, of Chile.

Miss Andrus, bidding for the singles crown in a crack international field that includes only one other American—Helen Jacobs, United States champion—held a 3-1 lead in the first set and apparently was headed for a decisive victory when a downpour forced suspension until tomorrow.

Little Known Pro Paired With Dutra

Lesser Lights Will Play With Several Stars for First Round.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 28.—The big guns won't begin to boom until mid-way through the first round of 162 starters—23 amateurs and 139 professionals—in the National Open golf championship starting at Oakmont, Pa., June 6.

The United States Golf Association has sprinkled a few favorites in the morning half of the pairings while the lower half has been freighted with most of the popular choices with an ever-alert eye to attracting spectators throughout the day.

Olin Dutra, the 1934 champion; Gene Sarazen, winner of the Augusta Invitation and figured "The man to beat;" Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., and Paul Runyan, National Professional titleholder, are among the late starters.

Dutra in Limelight.

The morning brigade includes Craig Wood and Ky Laffoon as well as Tommy Armour and Sid Brews, the South African champion.

A year ago Dutra, just one of 150 starters, was placed in the limelight paired with Lawson Little who had just returned from a victorious quest of the British amateur crown. This year the champion will open his defense with Francis Schneider of Oklahoma City, teeing off June 6, at 12:30 p. m. (Eastern Standard).

The title-holder will be followed 35 minutes later by Sarazen, accompanied by Fay Coleman of Culver City, Calif., a former well-known amateur, now a professional.

Runyan, driving his first ball at 1:25, will play with long-hitting Ray Mangrum of Los Angeles, while Picard, winner of the Metropolitan Open last week, getting off to a slightly earlier start, 12:45, has been paired with George B. Smith of Moorestown, N. J.

Wood Meets Perkins.

Wood will start his challenge at 8:50 a. m. with Ted Luther of Youngstown, Ohio, and at 9 a. m. Laffoon begins the 72-hole grind with Phil Perkins, the Cleveland pro and former winner of the British Amateur championship. Armour and Brews drive off at 9:30 a. m.

Reds Win 6th Straight, Beat Braves, 13 to 4

Cincinnati, May 28 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds ran up their longest winning streak in about four years—six straight games—today, as they fell on Flint Rhem and Ben Cantwell for 18 hits and defeated the Boston Braves, 13 to 4.

The Reds attacked the visiting hurlers with a barrage of extra-base wallops as Paul Derringer was holding the Braves to 11 hits. Riggs and Kampouris each contributed a triple, while Kampouris added two two-baggers and Lombardi did the same.

HoughtonPlays With Smith In Open

All Local Entrants Draw Well Known Rivals in First Round.

By Dave Herman.

AL HOUGHTON, Kenwood's sharpshooter, has drawn the most prominent partner of the four selected for Washington's qualifiers in the national open golf championship scheduled June 6, 7 and 8 at Oakmont's famous course.

Houghton's touring companion for the first 18-hole round of the 72-hole classic is none other than MacDonald Smith, the Carnoustie Scot, long overdue for an open crown—the man who lost in a play-off for the 1910 title with his brother, Alex, and J. J. McDermott, and who has flirted with the championship at least a dozen times.

Walker Meets Hill.

Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam pro, will play with Bob Campbell, Jenkintown, Pa., pro, at 11:45, and Leo Walper, Bethesda driving range pro, draws Carmen Hill, of Cleveland, as a partner at 12:10.

Suburban's Ralph Beach, former Burning Tree pro, who led the Middle Atlantic qualifiers at his home course with a smashing 137, which, incidentally, was low throughout the country in the sectional tests, tees off at 9:55 with a crackerjack player, Orville White, of St. Louis.

Virginia's participants, Wee Bobby Cruickshank, of Richmond, and Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, whose pro career is not quite a year old, are favored with expert golfers. Cruickshank plays with Joe Kirkwood, the Thurston of the links, at 1:45, and Harper plays with Horton Smith, the Joplin Ghost, at 12:25.

Cruickshank spent Monday and yesterday tuning up at Oakmont. The other Middle Atlantic entrants will be on the scene Monday.

McLarnin unleashed his long right which has spelled knockout to so many opponents for the first time in the fourth, but he kept too busy from then on trying to outbox the boxer turned slugger to let it loose many more times.

McLarnin piled up a nice lead with a two-fisted body attack and left jabs to the head, but Barney swept it all away with a sizzling right coming out of the body drives. The right landed flush on the chin whiskers sending McLarnin back on his heels. This taught the Irisher the futility of trying to play to the body under those conditions and he did not again punch to the midsection until Ross himself adopted similar tactics.

Action Becomes Faster.

In the tenth the boys set a new high for action that exceeded anything in the 40 rounds they had fought until that time. Bing, bang, bing, bang, they fired at each other, with Ross occasionally outgaming McLarnin and the Irisher just as often taking the exchanges with cleaner and better directed punches.

They wound up with a stirring finale which left them both dog-tired, but Ross doing such holding as was being done at the final bell. McLarnin wasted a bit of energy by turning the cartwheel which is his reception to victory before the decision had been rendered.

Belmont Feature To Bostwick Horse

By the Associated Press.

Belmont Park, N. Y., May 28.—Favorite players traveled a rough road here this afternoon. When E. R. Bradley's Bit of Sorrow finished sixth in the nine-horse field that contested the thirty-sixth running of the Harlem claiming stakes, it marked the fourth setback in as many races for the talent.

George Herbert (Pete) Bostwick's 3-year-old Allen Z., conceding weight by the scale to each of his opponents, managed to take down the $3,525 winner's portion of the purse, thanks largely to one of "Sonny" Workman's strong rides. The combination, quoted at 9 to 2, scored by a half length over William Ziegler, jr's, Bonanza. A. G. Vanderbilt's Dogmata, an invader from Rockingham Park, lost the place by a head under poor handling. Allen Z. covered the one mile in 1:38 flat.

Bangtails Return Today to Charles Town for 32-Day Meeting

Initial Card Offers Six Sprints

Return of Daily Double, New Course Will Help Meeting.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., May 28.—On the ancient horse show grounds here where West Virginia has constructed a snappy, six-furlong race track in its attempt to figure in the turf whirl that is sweeping the nation, horse racing returns today to start a 32-day session which will find the bangtails circling the course until July 4th.

At 2:30 this afternoon, or as soon thereafter as Starter George Palmer can get his field aligned, the horses will break from the starting gate and the action will be on. Seven races will mark the first program and sprints are in the majority. Those who prefer racing at a distance will have to wait until the seventh race.

Have Attractive Card.

Racing Secretary Pat Gallagher has arranged an attractive card, however, featured by the fifth race which includes many Maryland and West Virginia favorites. Wise Money, Justa Teacher and Tristrap are the three most likely to draw the chief betting. The test is over the new "Charles Town course." This route is 120 feet more than six furlongs and will be used for several races each day. The five-furlong course which caused much jamming and failed to give much chance to the outside horses, has been abandoned.

There is no scarcity of horses here and likewise there are no Omahas or Nellie Flags. However, the entries show full fields in every race tomorrow and the stables are burdened with the horseflesh seeking entry.

Despite the fact that Hagerstown is operating and will conflict with this course for the remainder of the week, officials are expecting a crowd of 5,000 tomorrow. Washington has given chief support to this track and as usual the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad will run a special train leaving Union Station at 12:30 p. m.

Resume Daily-Double.

By auto, Charles Town is reached by two routes. On the Virginia side of the Potomac the route is via Leesburg. A new section of road has cut down the distance by several miles. Those who prefer the Maryland side go through Frederick and Harpers Ferry. Of course, those who go via Frederick have their choice of the tracks. At the fork in the road, you may reach Hagerstown by turning right or Charles Town by keeping straight ahead.

Charles Town will resume operation of a daily double during this meeting. The first track in this section to have the twin wager, this form of betting was dropped at the last December session. As usual, the "double" will be on the first and third races.

Traders Fear Effects of Readjustments in New Deal.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 28.—Bearish forces romped through the stock market today and prices of leading industrials fell 1 to around 6 points.

The decline followed yesterday's Supreme Court upset of the NRA codes and, in brokerage circles, was attributed principally to the belief of many traders that until widespread adjustments are effected considerable economic unsettlement may follow the invalidation of one of the main planks of the New Deal program. The French financial crisis was also seen as a factor.

Many in Wall street seemed to feel that the long-term aspects of the important court decision were distinctly bullish inasmuch as business and industry may be free of what some have characterized as "undue governmental restrictions" and would be able to push ahead under their own power.

The equities list started on a brisk climb at the opening but the enthusiasm appeared to have been premature. Soon there was a reversal when the metals turned soft and the oils and other groups were sold at substantial concessions. The weakest issues were those of companies which, it was theorized, may be left high and dry in the competitive field by the loss of their codes.

At various times the ticker tape dropped several minutes behind floor transactions and the turnover for the session totaled 2,313,660 shares, the second largest of the year. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks suffered a loss of .9 of a point at 41.7.

Wheat Lower; Corn Is Strong

Divergent Views of NRA Decision Make Grain Pits Nervous.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 28.—Uneasiness prevailed in the grain pits today and prices fluctuated irregularly, wheat futures dipping fractionally while corn and oats displayed independent strength.

Market observers said the nervousness was attributable to some extent to conflicting views as to the ultimate effect of the Supreme Court's NRA decision on business in general and the grain trade in particular. Traders were hesitant in expressing opinions. A leading firm, Bartlett Frazier Co., said the decision in effect wipes out the grain exchange code and the country elevator code as far as labor and wage provisions are concerned, but "does not mean that Congress can not pass laws regulating the industry."

Wheat closed unchanged to ⅝ cent below the previous finish, July 87⅛@87¼, with May touching a new seasonal low of 85⅜. Corn was unchanged to a cent higher, July 78⅛@78¾; oats were ⅝ off to ½ up, rye lost ⅛@½, and barley was unchanged to a cent down.

Corn led the market rally, gaining more than a cent from early lows, with distant futures showing the most strength. Some fear was expressed that there has been too much rain in parts of the belt, but there was little disposition to fret over corn planting delays because of wet weather. Oats paralleled corn action. Provisions were easy, influenced by the halting of the hog market advance.

Big Store Announces 2% Off for Cash

Philadelphia, May 28.—A revolutionary step in the department store business was taken here today when Strawbridge & Clothier, one of the country's largest retail stores, announced a discount of 2 per cent on cash sales, 1 per cent on charge accounts paid within 30 days and extension of the normal credit period from 30 to 60 days. The new policy, effective May 31, was adopted to remove a discrimination against the cash customer and the customer with a charge account who pays his bills promptly, according to Herbert J. Tily, president of the store.

Unemployment Has April Drop Of 1.3 Per Cent

But Total of 9,623,000 Is 3.3% Over Same Month in 1934.

New York, May 28.—The total number of unemployed workers in April, 1935, was 9,623,000, according to the regular monthly estimate of the National Industrial Conference Board, made public today. This is a decrease of 129,000, or 1.3 per cent, from the preceding month, but an increase of 305,000, or 3.3 per cent over April, 1934.

From March to April, 1935, the decreases in unemployment, by industrial groups, were: trade, 127,000; manufacturing and mechanical industries, 44,000; transportation, 12,000; miscellaneous industries, 4,000. Unemployment in mining showed an increase of 25,000 and domestic and personal service, 7,000.

Compared with April, 1934, unemployment in April, 1935, declined 5.7 per cent in trade; 2.9 per cent in mining, and 0.8 per cent in manufacturing and mechanical industries. In domestic and personal service, however, unemployment rose 4.1 per cent; in transportation, 3.7 per cent, and in miscellaneous industries, 0.5 per cent.

Treasury's Experiment in Offering $100,000,000 Bonds to Highest Bidders Meets Little Favor in Wall Street; Dealers in Governments Resentful.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, May 28.—Wall street responded quite unfavorably to the Treasury's latest experiment in offering a block of $100,000,000 of 3 per cent 13-year bonds to the highest bidders.

The financial district believes that a relatively efficient system for marketing new offerings of Government bonds has been built up over a period of years. Under this system, large Government issues are expected to be made at par on the four quarterly financing dates of the Treasury. Dealers, banks and financial institutions generally make their calculations accordingly, so as to participate actively in the rapid and orderly distribution of such new issues as they come along.

The decline in the quotation of the 3s of 1946-8 by fully ⅝ of a point, and the smaller recessions in other Treasury bonds, was pointed to as an indication of what is to be expected if the competitive bidding system is adopted as a regular method of Government financing.

Government bond dealers are particularly resentful. The consensus of opinion among them is that new financing by repeated small issues offered to the highest bidders would severely curtail their own activity in the Government bond market.

Unexpected Offering Would Cause Decline.

In the first place, they say, it will be some less attractive and more dangerous for dealers to hold large inventories of Government bonds, since a price decline might be precipitated at any time by an unexpected new offering of the kind now being attempted. Hitherto, with large offerings of long-term bonds for new money restricted to three or four occasions a year, dealers have been in a position to plan well ahead. Between financing dates, they have felt free to acquire substantial inventories of bonds when offerings increased in the market, thus contributing to price stability.

The dealers' role will be curtailed most at the time when new financing takes place. Hitherto, such new offerings have been made on a basis to give subscribers premium of half a point to more than a point. This made it attractive for dealers to acquire large blocks of new issues, which they subsequently distributed as occasion permitted. Thus, the premiums on a new issue was actually a means of compensating dealers for their work in facilitating distribution of new Treasury offerings to institutional and individual investors.

Dealers are likely to follow a hand-to-mouth policy from now on, they say, as long as the Treasury will continue to offer new issues to the highest bidders without reference to fixed financing dates. They also believe they will have to curtail their organizations, as it will probably become considerably more difficult to operate large Government bond trading departments on a profitable basis.

Bankers Do Not Relish Uncertainty of New Issues.

Banks and trust companies also express considerable dissatisfaction with the proposed new departure in Treasury financing, although their objections are not generally as strong as those of dealers. In the first place, these institutions dislike the added uncertainty in subscribing to new issues. They may bid too high and thus have an immediate capital loss, which conservative banks dislike. Also, fear of unexpected new offerings may discourage purchases in the open market with surplus funds.

Trust company officers point out that competitive bidding may create a special problem for them. It is conceivable that they may be called upon to defend a given bid on a new issue for a trust account where beneficiaries later object and seek to recover damages.

It is believed that the Government is motivated by three considerations in seeking to adopt the competitive bidding system of selling new Treasury offerings. In the first place, it is hoped to get a higher price through eliminating the premium now generally available to buyers when new issues occur at par. In the second place, the Treasury is believed eager to eliminate the padded subscriptions now common and "joy-riding" by those who do not intend to hold Government bonds, but merely to profit from the expected premium. The competitive bidding system is held likely to bring out only bona fide bids. Thirdly, by spacing the new offerings more frequently, the Treasury may facilitate the handling of its cash balance.

Last July, an issue of $100,000,000 of Federal Farm Mortgage 3 per cent bonds was sold to the highest bidders. That offering marked the culmination of the rise in the Government bond market, and a severe reaction followed. While a number of influences combined to cause that severe but temporary decline, Government bond dealers point out that the resort to competitive bidding was a vital factor, and that may be seen if the plan is pushed now.

New Bank Act Forward Step, Says Giannini

Banker Holds Control Is No More Political Than U.S. Supreme Court.

New York, May 28.—The banking act of 1935 is a distinct forward step—not a radical document sprung from the brains of theorists, but deeply rooted in 20 years of practical experience with the Federal Reserve act as tested by the worst depression in history.

This is the opinion of A. P. Giannini, chairman of the board of Bank of America N. T. & S. A., and a director of the National City Bank and City Bank Farmers Trust Co. of New York, as expressed in a signed article appearing in the issue of the magazine Today to be published tomorrow.

The head of the State-wide California branch bank said that although there is a popular impression that the bankers of the Nation are opposed to the banking act of 1935, the majority of bankers actually feel as he feels on the subject.

"I think that the assumption by private bankers of the responsibility for functions which in every other country are matters of public concern would be dangerous to the future of private banking in this country," said Mr. Giannini. He added that determination of monetary and credit policies have been dominated by certain New York private banks with international connections.

"I take no stock in the 'political domination' argument against the banking bill," said Mr. Giannini. "The Federal Reserve Board is a political body only in the sense that its members are nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate; so are the members of the Supreme Court.

"Nor does it follow, as the critics of the bill assume, that because the Federal Reserve Board is in this sense a political body, it must necessarily be subservient and inefficient."

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—Business on the stock exchange today was restricted due to the uncertainties of the continental financial position. Gilt-edged securities and gold mining shares weakened, while industrials and rails were supported. Transatlantic issues firmed on the United States Supreme Court NRA decision. The closing was irregular.

Paris—After a strong opening, rentes receded slightly on the bourse today when the Bank of France announced a third increase within a week in the discount rate, raising it from 4 to 5 per cent. Stocks strengthened slightly but the market was irregular awaiting further developments. International issues were generally lower. The market closed heavy.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

The French franc monopolized attention in foreign exchange markets yesterday when the Bank of France raised its rediscount rate to 5 per cent, forcing extensive covering and switching from other currencies.

In London the franc was in brisk demand and rose to 74.82 before slipping back to 74.93 to the pound toward the close. The dollar was higher in terms of sterling, closing at 4.93⅝ to the pound against an overnight New York rate of 4.94⅛.

In New York the franc was active, but slipped back for a net loss of .60⅛ of a cent after early steadiness. In Paris the dollar was a trifle lower at an equivalent of 6.583 cents to the franc. Other gold currencies were about even.

Bond Traders Make Switches; Rails Steady

Foreign Issues React to Situation in France; Federals Easy.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 28.—The corporate market pursued an irregular course today as traders and investors made adjustments, switches and other commitments in the light of NRA's downfall before the Supreme Court. United States Governments were easy all day.

Rail loans were more stable than other groups and ended the day with slight gains predominating, while utilities held about even and industrials slipped back. Low yield bonds were indifferent. Foreign issues were upset by the French situation.

Transfers aggregated $13,330,000, par value, compared with $9,980,000 on Monday. The turnover in Governments accounted for $2,100,000 against $1,970,000 the day before. The Associated Press averages were .2 of a point higher to .3 of a point lower.

While there was little specific news affecting United States Governments and they were under only modest pressure, losses among Treasuries averaged 4-32ds to 6-32ds and indirect obligations declined nearly as much. Liberties were generally inactive.

A further drop in French bonds claimed the central attention in the foreign department. The 7½s lost 3 points at 175 and the 7s were about that much lower at 173½. German obligations were also a trifle lower but Italian 7s were 2¼ points higher at 88 and a generally steadier tone prevailed among Central and South American issues.

Cotton Slumps Under Sales

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 28.—Cotton futures dropped 26 to 36 points in today's early trading under heavy commission house liquidation and foreign selling influenced by the Supreme Court decision of the NRA, but later rebounded to close with net losses of only 11 to 15 points.

The selling was attributed largely to uncertainties over the effects of the Supreme Court decision in influencing agricultural legislation now pending, as well as the legality of certain phases of the present crop control program.

Heavy Selling Features Curb

By the Associated Press.

New York, May. 28.—In the largest trading session this year the curb market sold off sharply today in response to the Supreme Court's decision on the NRA. A few of the utilities and industrial specialties were resistant, but the general list closed weak. Transfers approximated 405,000 shares, almost double yesterday's turnover.

Among the power and light issues American Gas & Electric finished a point higher, while Electric Bond & Share was up a fraction. Other steady spots included Swift Internacional, Montgomery Ward "A" and Great Atlantic & Pacific.

Jersey City Asks Bids On $5,000,000 Bonds

Jersey City N. J., May 28.—Jersey City is advertising today for bids on two bond issues, totaling $5,000,000, and comprising $1,800,000 of to 1953, inclusive, and $3,200,000 of general refunding bonds, maturing 1940 to 1952, inclusive. Bids, which must be for "all or none," will be opened on June 4 at 11 a. m.

The terms of sale permit a discount bid, provided only that any such discount on the $5,000,000 principal amount of bonds must not exceed $250,000 in total. Coupon rates must be in multiples of ¼ of 1 per cent and can not exceed 4½ per cent.

Export Copper Sales At New High Prices

New York, May 28 (AP).—Sales of copper were made abroad today at a price equivalent to 8.50 to 8.55 cents a pound, c.i.f. European base ports, a new high in more than a year, according to reports reaching dealers here. The volume of sales was described as "moderately heavy" at that price level.

No change was reported in the price of domestic from the 9-cents-a-pound level established by the NRA code.

Imaginary Interviews—Lawson Little.

Q.—How does it seem to win the British amateur twice in succession?

A.—It would have been a great trick even if I hadn't accomplished it.

Q.—Do you realize you were the first American to do it?

A.—Yes, and I still think I must have been part Hindoo.

Q.—Have you got any suggestion for making British amateur golf championships more enjoyable?

Q.—Was Dr. Tweddell a hard opponent?

A.—Right now I would rather spend a week in his dental chair as a patient than two rounds with him on the links as a golf opponent.

Q.—Why?

A.—Because it wouldn't hurt any more and I wouldn't have to do any walking.

* * * *

A.—No; on those last 18 holes it couldn't have been any tougher if he had been using forceps.

* * * *

Q.—Is it true that the dentist had a tendency to "pull" his shots?

A.—No punning, please.

Q.—How was he on putting?

A.—It's a good thing for me those cavities on the putting greens were no bigger.

* * * *

Q.—Who was the best golfer you met?

A.—Dr. Tweddell.

Q.—How would you rank the others?

A.—Looking back, it strikes me they were just a lot of boys who kept saying, "Aw, go on into his office and have it out, it won't hurt much."

* * * *

Q.—How did you feel after you had the dentist down three holes in the first nine and then won by one after 36?

A.—You know how it feels when you think everything is fixed, and then the gold filling suddenly comes out.

* * * *

Q.—Mr. Little, you learned golf in China; do you think that had any influence on your career?

A.—After you've played golf in China it seems easier anywhere else.

Q.—Is there any particular advantage in learning golf in China?

A.—Yes; it teaches you to keep coolie.

* * * *

A.—To my Chinese golf tutor.

Q.—Who was he?

A.—One Long Wham!

Relative Values.

Lawson Little is British amateur champion for the second time by virtue of a victory over Dr. William Tweddell, a British dentist. The dentist gave him a great battle; in fact, you might say he was going great gums most of the time.

Thurston, the magician, has married the young lady whom he used to saw in half. Yet there were people who told her there was no future in it.

Our last night here. How lovely the air is. But you seem so gloomy, Hartford.
Gloomy? Perhaps so. I was dreaming. Of those dear days when first we met. The night at your dad's lodge dance, when I timidly pressed your hand and...
Oh my dosh, that's such ancient history.
To me it seems only last evening since I so bashfully led you onto the dance floor, and as the band swept into the strains of Darling I Love You, we...
That lodge band. What a noise.
Your eyes were so soft. How you trembled as we stood on the balcony later, swaying toward each other as I murmured.... ahem! Here's visitors.
There's Peddy and Hartford. They're talking. Let's not interrupt...
We certainly will. Do you think I want to give Peddy another chance to get completely batty about that man? Yoo hoo! It's only us!

11,000 Troops Of D. C., Nearby To Join Games

Plans to send 11,000 regular troops and National Guardsmen from Washington, Maryland and Virginia into the field in August to participate in the First Army maneuver, which will be the greatest war game ever held in this country, have been completed by Guard officers and officials at the War Department, it was learned yesterday.

Hundreds of Washingtonians and thousands from nearby Maryland and Virginia will take part in the big concentration at Pine Camp, N. Y., with reserves stationed at Mount Gretna, Pa. A total of 56,000 men drawn from the eastern seaboard will be called into the maneuver, which will be directed by Maj. Gen. Dennis Nolan, commanding the Second Corps Area with headquarters at Governors Island, N. Y. The war games will be from August 17 to September 1.

Units to be Called.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord will command the Twenty-ninth Division of the National Guard, which will be composed principally of men drawn from the vicinity of Washington. In addition, the Sixteenth Infantry Brigade of regulars, under command of Brig. Gen. Perry Miles, with headquarters in Washington, will take part.

The Sixteenth Infantry Brigade consists of the Twelfth and Thirty-fourth Infantry Regiments. The troops will be drawn from Fort Myer, Fort Meade, Fort Washington and Fort Hoyle.

Maj. Gen. Reckord's troops will include the 121st Engineers, under the command of Col. John W. Oehmann, and special troops from here under Maj. William T. Roy.

Virginia units to take part in the games include the Ninety-first Infantry Brigade, under Brig. Gen. S. Gardner Waller; the First Virginia Infantry from Richmond, under Col. John F. Bright; the 116th Infantry commanded by Col. George M. Alexander, and the 111th Field Artillery headed by Col. William H. Sands.

Maryland Divisions.

Maryland will be represented by the 104th Medical Regiment, under Col. Frederick H. Vinup; the Twenty-ninth Aviation Division, under Maj. Charles A. Masson; the Fifty-eighth Infantry Brigade, headed by Brig. Gen. Washington Bowie, jr.; the First Maryland Infantry, commanded by Col. John I. Markey; the Fifth Maryland Infantry, led by Col. Frank Hancock, and the 110th Field Artillery, under Col. Beverly Ober. In addition, some special troops from Virginia will take part, together with the Fifty-fourth Field Artillery, which draws men from Maryland and Virginia and is commanded by Brig. Gen. J. Craig McLanahan.

The Game of Life

By Priscilla Wayne.

ON her knees Ellen asked God's help. Always, when she was a little girl and had been worried or perplexed she had gone to the great Father of us all, in prayer. And tonight she asked for the most precious gift in all the world to a mother—the life of her baby.

Michael came up the stairs. She recognized his step, rushed to the door to meet him. "There isn't any change yet, Ellen," Michael said. "I just wondered if you were sleeping. I thought Dad should come up and give you a hypodermic so you can get a little sleep."

"I don't want to sleep, Mike. I'm going to wash and tidy up a little pretty soon and then I want to go on down."

"You'd better stay here, Ellen," Mike said. "They won't let either of us in. Too many in the room makes confusion. They're doing everything in their power."

Meant to Help.

"It would have happened if you had been here, Ellen. Somewhere—perhaps we'll never know exactly where, little Mike got the germ. It's one of those things——"

"But that it had to be our baby——"

"I wonder," Michael said, a far-away look on his face. "The ways of life and death are hard to understand, Ellen. I wonder—perhaps our baby's short life was meant to help us——"

But Ellen pushed Michael's tender arm away, sat up, a great surge of horror sweeping over her. "Mike, you talk—you talk so hopelessly—you said our baby's short life—oh, Mike, God wouldn't take him away from us—He couldn't——"

Must Be Brave.

Michael held his wife firmly, trying to still the wild fluttering of her hands. "Listen, Ellen, we've got to face what comes. Doctor told me—just a few minutes ago——"

"Your father?"

"No. The specialist. He told me that—that he'd given up—all hope."

"Then I'm going down," Ellen sobbed wildly. "I've got to go down. Oh, Mike, you can't keep me here. I've got to go down. He's too little—my baby's too little—to go—out—away over there—alone."

They met Dr. John on the stairway. "Come softly," he said and his face was gray with anguish.

Michael's arm was about her as Ellen went softly through the door that had been closed to her. The professional appearing woman at the desk had opened the door silently for Ellen, without a word.

Ellen Sees Dimly.

Ellen didn't see that Doctor John and Mary were in the quiet of the room, holding close to each other as they had all their lives—for comfort. She didn't see that the great specialist was sitting at the bedside, his hand on the tiny pulse and that the tears flowed down his cheeks unchecked, unhindered.

She scarcely knew even that Michael was at her side. She saw only the baby on the bed—so slight, so tiny under the light covers.

She knelt by the bed—seeing nothing but that tiny, quiet form, hearing nothing but the quick, sharp breathing that was an agony to every person in the room.

She held the other hand—so tiny. How his soft fingers had curled about hers. In the hospital when he was just a few hours old—clinging, clinging — knowing by blind instinct that a small, frail soul in a great big new world must cling very tightly to the ones that love him.

All Was Over.

She stroked the velvety forehead with its masses of tight brown curls—so like an older Michael's.

And under her breath she found herself praying: "Dear God, please don't let my baby died. Don't let my baby die—don't let my baby die."

But something in the room hushed even the wild frenzy of her lips. A Presence. And then, though Ellen had never witnessed death before, she knew that the grim angel stood even then within the portals of the room, laid hands that minute upon the tiny form.

Baby Michael moved ever so slightly. Flung out a rosy arm. His blue eyes opened for a fleeting instant—but they were not seeing Ellen. Were they seeing instead that garden far away where the Master plants the loveliest flowers of them all?

Service Was Simple.

For there was the hint of a smile on Michael's baby lips as the agonized breathing came to a sudden, abrupt end.

Mary arranged the simple services.

Ellen stood for a long, long time gazing down at her baby. She wanted to keep the picture forever in her memory. Time would dull the memory, that she knew. The passing years would fade the anguish of that hour into a tenderness that would always halo little Mike's brief earthly pilgrimage.

Michael stopped. Tenderly unfastened one of the little white shoes, handed it silently to Ellen. And Ellen smiled tenderly through her tears to see the place where the wee heel had been unsteady and run the soft leather over.

Ellen Was Brave.

"I'll get another pair," she said, almost as she had said so many, many times. She gave the other little white shoe to Michael and tenderly placed small pink bootees on her baby's feet.

All of them came into the room then. A smile hovered about Mother Mary's gentle lips. "If we believe in God then we must believe that His decision to take our treasure was for the best," she was telling herself over and over again. "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord."

This wan form lying before them wasn't Mike—only the empty shell of what had been a beautiful, brief life. Little Michael, himself, was far away—"In my Father's house are many mansions—if it were not so, I would have told you."

And so Ellen, her arms around Michael, urged him to new courage and to hope.

Career Offered.

The young minister came from the parish where little Michael had been baptized. His voice spoke gentle words of friendly counsel and he read from the wise old Book of Books.

They talked things over in the quiet of Mama's living room. "I've got a professional offer. I'm going away," Ellen said. "The offer is for six months and goes straight through the winter. It begins immediately—somewhere, some place in the world it is always tennis, you know." She tried to smile, tried to act immensely pleased.

Ellen shook her head slowly.

"No, Michael. There isn't any reason for me to go home with you now. We said goodby to the last reason yesterday. Our marriage was a mistake. And we found it out very quickly, didn't we? Now the decent thing is to—to forget."

"Speak for Yourself."

"What if I don't want to—forget?" Michael asked.

"You'll have to forget, Michael. You don't love me—you never really did. It was sentiment, I guess. I was your first sweetheart and you were mine—but you never really loved me."

"Speak for yourself," Mike said.

But pride still chained her. If Michael had held out his arms to her, if for even one blinding instant Ellen could have believed that he still cared, she would have gone into his arms to stay.

"Well, then, I never really loved you. And if we stayed together it would be sentiment—memory—that held us. Don't you know it, Mike, don't you?"

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

A series of broadcasts aboard the French liner S. S. Normandie will begin today, when both networks will pick up descriptions of the liner's departure from Havre, France. This will be heard at 11:45 a. m., WJSV; 11: a. m., WRC, and 11:45 a. m., WMAL. In addition to the descriptions, famous passengers will be interviewed with harbor noises as a background.

On the Columbia network the blowing of the liner's whistle will release radio impulses that will set the San Diego mission bell tolling, thereby inaugurating a preview of the California Pacific International Exposition. A description of the exposition will be carried on both networks, coming through WJSV at 2:55 p. m. and WRC at 3:15 p. m. Columbia will present a number of notables on this program, including Government officials and screen stars.

Gordon Hittenmark, (Your Timekeeper) will try something new on his WRC program today. At 7 a. m. you'll hear him speaking from the street by remote control, telling you how the sun is looking, how the weather is, in short, just what it's like to be at Fourteenth and F in the small hours of the morning.

Dial twists of merit:

Jacques Abram, 12-year-old Houston, Tex., pianist, makes his debut today at 11 a. m., WRC. His program: Schumann's "Des Abends," two preludes by Rachmaninoff, Medtner's "Fairy Tale," and Ravel's "Toccata."

Burns and Allen change to new time and are on WJSV at 9 p. m. tonight.

A pre-Memorial Day program from the floor of Chicago's grain mart is presented by the Board of Trade, with Robert P. Boylan, president of the Chicago board, as main speaker. WJSV, 3:30 p. m.

Arthur Krock, winner of one of the Pulitzer prizes for journalism, speaks on WMAL, 8:45 p. m. His subject: "The Future of World Trade."

Senator Thomas, of Utah, "How Can We Stay Out of War?" on WJSV, 7:15 p. m.

Gen. Johnson speaks on WJSV, 8:30 p. m., on "Where Do We Go From Here?"

Art Godfrey wasn't on the Sundial yesterday mornnig because he rolled over on the wrong shoulder. It hurt, he called the doctor, who found the collar bone poking up at a dangerous angle. So WJSV fixed it up so Art can do this morning's show while flat on his back at home.

Youth Rally Will Hear Jackson, Marcantonio

Gardner Jackson, Washington newspaper man and former New Dealer, and Representative Vito Marcantonio, New York Republican, will be speakers at a United Youth Day rally, sponsored by the American Youth Congress, at Friends' Meeting House, 1811 I street, northwest, Thursday at 8 p. m. Representatives of Washington youth organizations also will speak. Similar meetings will be held throughout the country Thursday and speakers will direct their attention against war and fascism.

Sacrifice Trick.

SOMETIMES a man must be braver to play safe than to take a chance. It is likely to go against the grain of anyone from an expert to a dub, to give up a trick which could be won merely by playing a little trump. But careful reasoning will often reveal the fact that this sacrifice method pays valuable dividends.

West, Dealer.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1♡	2◇	Pass	2♠
Pass	3♠	Pass	4♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

South was somewhat disappointed to hear North overcall in diamonds; any other suit he could have supported enthusiastically. But when North immediately supported his spade suit, he had no hesitancy to going to game.

The Play.

West opened his singleton Queen of clubs; the diamond bid guided him away from the King of diamonds, which would probably have been his choice otherwise. The first trick was won with North's club King, and the Queen of diamonds was led, South discarding a heart.

This seems, superficially, like a strange play. South, having no diamonds and two small trumps which are necessary for no other purpose, could easily afford to ruff this lead. But while a trick would thus be won, no foundation would be laid for the future winning of tricks. South preferred to invest, hoping to gather three tricks as a future reward.

After West won the King of diamonds he shifted to a spade. Dummy won this trick and again one of the diamond sequence was led. Again South refrained from trumping, discarding another heart. Again West won the trick. But this was West's last high diamond. The suit was now established.

Nothing now remained for South to do but to lead out his four trumps, then concede a trick to the Ace of hearts. West took his three honor-trick combinations, but nothing else; the dummy was then left with only established winners.
